So they decided to form a new tribe, governed by such rules as they might select. Their model was the Connecticut town government, with which they were familiar. Such a town they would establish, in which they would be voters; and as they proposed to live together as "brothers" they had an appropriate name for their town and tribe —

Pioneers

Forget not yet, forget not yet
That once we were your peers;
Remember, though the world forgot,
We were the pioneers.

We braved the fever swamps by night
The deserts heat at noon;
We wandered, lost to all mens sight,
Beneath the wan white moon.

When in the burning noon of day,
The forest-wind blows sweet,
Forget not us, who made the way
Smooth ground beneath your feet.

We dug the wells we may not drink,
The gold that buys not life;
Spent, in the forest's heart we sink,
Forgotten of the strife.

Brothertown, Wis. July 11, 1900 - Chilton Times

The old oak tree, known as "Council Tree", and ^{comes} the stake in the Northwest corner of this town, on Lot 1 was blown down during the big storm ~~So~~ Tuesday.

They waste us; ay like April snow
In the warm noon, we shrink away;
And fast they follow as we go
Towards the setting day, Till they shall fill the land, and we Are driven into the western sea.

A flour mill was erected here in 1835-36 by the Brothertown Indians under the supervision of Moody Mann. It was later transferred to Alb. G. Ellis of Green

In 1848 it was converted to steam after. This was the first mill erected on Lake Winnebago and served the settlers from Plymouth to Oshkosh.

The Mill house served as a jail
for the Menominee Brothers, Stockbridge Indians who had killed Jos Palmer on July 3, 1836 as he was returning from Green Bay.

They were tried by the Brothertown and Stockbridge Indians and sentenced to be hanged Oct 1, 1836 but they made their escape before that date.

Preacher John Dick, a Seven Day Adventist died here. He had quite a large following

The mill was a favorite gathering place for the Indians

It was said that at certain periods of the year, people who had wheat to ^{grind} were compelled to wait a week before they were able to have their wheat milled

Daniel Dick sold the West Fraction of Lot 10 to Victoria Featherstonhaugh, wife of G. W. Featherstonhaugh on March 16, 1841, containing 33 $\frac{4}{5}$ acres for \$150⁰⁰

G. W. Featherstonhaugh was appointed by the Government to survey the Brothertown Reserve in 1838. He served in the Territorial Legislature, was part owner in the Steamboat Manchester. He was well educated and considered a fine artist. He moved to Milwaukee in his later days and died there in destitute circumstances.

The first store at Brothertown was erected by Moses Buffam for Proctor B. Davis on the West Fraction of Lot 10. He sold the building to G. W. Featherstonhaugh in 1845.

A. H. Hammer and E. M. Dick remembered the store. A road led from the baseline road to the store following the lot line of Lot 10 and 11.

G. W. Featherstonhaugh surveyed the Town of Brothertown during July, Aug., Sept. 1838, with the help of the Commissioners, Charles Anthony, Alonso S. Dick, Randall Abner St., Thomas Commmuck, and David Johnson.

He was paid $500 for his work. The Commissioners received $960 for their labor and for settling claims, $250 was paid the attorney and the Justice of Peace.

On Mar 16, 1841, Daniel Dick sold to Victoria Featherstonhaugh 33 $\frac{41}{100}$ acres of the Wester Fraction of Lot 10 for \$150 $\frac{00}{00}$. On July 22, 1845, Geo W. bought from one store building or frame built by Moses Buffam situated and standing upon the south east corner of the fraction of Lot 10 Consideration \$165 $\frac{00}{00}$.

This drawing of George W. Featherstonhaugh, the first signer of the Wisconsin state constitution, is hanging in the home of Michael F. Cudahy, 2405 E. Wyoming pl. It was made, some time in the 1880's, by a clerk who worked for the Cudahy Packing Co.

MILWAUKEE JOURNAL - May 5, 1946 - Green Street

Picturesque Featherstonhaugh First Signer of Our Constitution

By CHARLES D. STEWART

Michael F. Cudahy has hanging on the wall of his library at home a drawing of an early Milwaukee character whom he calls "the picturesque old man." And his father had it hanging there before him. It is the portrait of George W. Featherstonhaugh, the first signer of the constitution of the state of Wisconsin. It was drawn sometime in the '80's by a clerk in the employ of the Cudahy packing firm.

Featherstonhaugh was a local political leader in Calumet county, and tradition says that he had been a newspaperman in those parts. As age crept upon him he moved to Milwaukee. As an avocation he made oil paintings which he sold to his admirers; he was a familiar figure in all the downtown bars, and he drank his whisky straight.

Now that the Centurama has arrived and people all over the state are having local centennial observances, it seemed time to take G. W. down off the nail and show him off.

"It Behooves Us—"

He was something more than "picturesque"; but in his latter days the more moral and upright people of the city were very conscious that G. W. spent a good deal of his time in saloons, not asking themselves where else a statesman was going to meet his cronies to settle important questions.

As my boyhood home was on 3rd st., just where the Miller hotel now stands, and he had his room on 4th "grammar" referred to anything st., I saw a great deal of him when I was 12 to 14 years of age. And he engaged my curiosity because I knew he was some sort of a distinguished man.

Three things I learned directly from him; and one was the meaning of the word "behooves." Being sent by two machinists, Murphy and O'Connor, to get them a bucket of beer, I went to the saloon on Spring st. (Wisconsin av.) about three doors east of 3rd st. It was the same location which was later occupied for many years by Ald. John Koerner's barroom.

At the end of the bar was a tall, bewhiskered man holding forth on political questions, and as he stretched out his arm he said, "It behooves us to"—do so and so. I had never heard that word before, and as I listened to his talk I was rooted to the spot. By the time I had gathered the whole meaning of "behooves" the beer had gone pretty flat.

Intellectual Ancestry

At another time I learned through him the larger meaning of the word "grammar." In those days the Milwaukee public library was located upstairs where the Penney store now is. Downstairs was Espenhai's store, and a broad wooden stairway led up to the library from the street.

I was coming down those stairs with one of Oliver Optic's books when I overtook Featherstonhaugh, who was carrying a large volume. Always curious about him, I looked to see what book he had, and it was entitled "The Grammar of Color."

That was the first time I knew that

"grammar" referred to anything

outside of language. He was quite a patron of the public library.

Finally I learned from him that if you mix blue and yellow paint they make green. To a boy who had recently been presented with some tubes of Winsor and Newton's oil colors, that was a wonderful piece of information. Knowing that he had read a grammar of color and probably knew everything about pictures, I had ventured to engage him in a few words upon the subject.

George W. Featherstonhaugh was of decidedly intellectual ancestry. His father, of the same name, was once known as "United States geologist." He explored this part of the country in the early nineteenth century and among many books he wrote were "Geological Reconnaissance in 1835 From Green Bay to Coteau de Prairie," and "Canoe Voyage Up the Minnay Sotor." That is how Minnesota was then spelled. He also wrote on political subjects. That our own George W. Featherstonhaugh was something more than the barroom character of local gossip is indicated by the fact that in his latter days he took to oil painting.

But that he knew his way around a saloon is no doubt a fact. He had a way about him. If he had not sold a painting and was short of funds, he would appear before the mahogany bar and speak as a man who spoke with authority. He would say—"Bartender, let me have a drink—one just about as big as your heart." This latter would indicate that it was not going to be paid for. And he would get it.

The first steps to make Wisconsin a state were taken in 1846. In that year the territorial legislature passed an act enabling the people to say whether they wanted to be a state or not—which they did. Then came the first constitutional convention, of 1846, whose work was rejected by the people. This necessitated the second constitutional convention of 1848, whose work was accepted; and it is to this that G. W. Featherstonhaugh's name is signed. It heads the signers and stands out prominently by its length. Many townships in southern Wisconsin—probably the greater number of them were incorporated in '46—a wave of immigration at that time causing them to spring into being. And so, with so many centennials in the air, it seemed about time to take G. W. from the wall and dust him off.

In his very old age he went to live with a sister in Illinois. John Gregory, Milwaukee's oldest newspaperman, tells me that when Featherstonhaugh was away from the big city and his barroom cronies, he was a very decent old man and did not drink at all.

Calumetville

⑪ - Fond du Lac Co.

The village of Calumetville was first visited by Samuel A. Storrow, Judge Advocate of the U. S. Army in 1817.

He called it the village of Fols-Avoines, "wild rice" and ~~had been~~^{had been} ~~had~~^{had} population of 150 or even more Indians who were lazy and very dirty but their fields, were large and well kept.

The Methodist minister, Rev. Geo White settled there in 1837 and was the first settler. He performed the first marriage ceremony in Fond du Lac Co. when he united Mr. & Mrs. Francis White.

Rev. White describes the first view of his new home at Calumet in these words:-

"He had never before seen a ~~fine~~ prairie and the impression the sight produced was enchanting. It reminded us of the poet's description of the "sweet fields arrayed in living green" in the promised land."

George White also conducted a general store and the first Post office. He have a book stamped with the Post office stamp of Calumet Village and his name.

MILES BLAKESLEY-Died, 1858 - age 86 years
B. F. White, MD. Died May 4, 1862 - age 34 years
Mary Francis White Died, 1855 - age 18 years

Many children were buried here for Chapman estate.

⑪ Calumet

Dr White and other white settlers were buried on a gravel knoll just east of the bridge as you enter Calumetville from the south on Highway 55. When Atesia Beach was plotted, the gravel and the bones of these first white settlers was used to surface the roads. We have one of the large copper pennies they used to place over the eyes of the dead. Given me by Joe Schepp

Albert G. Ellis of Green Bay surveyed the town in 1834; "The stream entering ^{at} Calumet Village though small and bare at mouth is nevertheless large enough for a harbor for boats and a small pier at the mouth would deepen the water so that it might be entered. The banks are high and beautiful and Calumet Village is a beautiful site." This was written upon the spot over a year before there was a white settler in Fond du Lac County.

Herman Heeson erected a large stone flour mill, on the lake shore, now Atesia Beach. It was run by steam power. He also built a large beautiful home on the lot, William Bock moved the house up to the village in the 90ths and used it to store finished lumber from his lumber yard. The mill was erected in 1851.

The village of Calumet was Sept. 1, 1824 contained 30 hunters and three times that number of women and children according to the report of H. B. Brinkvoort, Indian Agent of Green Bay. This did not include old men Chas Guignon of Green Bay and Swan of Manitowoc, both traded with the Menomonees at Calumet in 1824.

Samuel Stambaugh, U.S. Indian Agt. at Green Bay in 1831-1832, in his report to the Secy. of War, dated 1/8/31 has this to say of Calumet; "This valley and mountain terminate in this direction, within fifteen miles of the S.E. corner of the Lake, in extensive dry Prairies of the choicest soil. There is a considerable indentation in the land at this place; and turning ^{the} last angle of the mountain ascending the Lake, these rich plains, covered with herbage of luxuriant growth, have the appearance of a highly cultivated country. The Indians call these Prairies "Wase-skis-sink" which signifies "Shining Prairies". On the margin of the lake about the centre of these plains, in front, the Menomonees have a large village, called Calumet; the chief of which, "Little Wave" is one of the Menomonees chiefs who signed the Treaty at Washington last winter." He describes the Prairie; "They contain, at a moderate estimate fifteen thousand acres; and are divided into fields, with surprising regularity, of about two hundred acres each, by clusters of oak and hickory surrounding them, so arranged that each enclosure thus formed, appears, in viewing it from the center, to be isolated from the rest. I passed over these plains in August, when they were covered by tall grass and wild flowers, which, at a little distance, gave them the appearance of rich farms, in high state of cultivation; upon close inspection, they losing nothing of their beauty. The soil is of the very best quality for successful cultivation and every acre is ready for the plough of the farmer, without any preparatory labor except fencing.

The Menominee tribes must have had two villages at Calumet at different times for we find them in 1824, when Brevoort passed through, living on the lake shore where the Boy Scout Camp is now located, they also lived there when Samuel Stambaugh came through in 1831, but Judge Samuel A. Storrow, in 1817 describes the village thus: "Amelioration of the grounds, a few foot paths and traces of habitations denoted that we were near the object of our destination, and shortly afterwards in passing from a wood, we saw it at a distance. It was the village of Gals. Avoines, "wild rice" that is Menominees, situated on the edge of a prairie which borders Lake Winnebago. The lake lay before it one side [that is, on the west side] and on the other the prairie, rising with a gentle acclivity from the margin of the water. The spot was well chosen for beauty, warmth and fertility. There is nothing about it that indicated a recent commencement. The grounds bore marks of long cultivation and the trees that were left standing seemed as if distributed for ornament and shade. The village has received the name of Calumet; it consist of about one hundred and fifty souls and rarely been visited by whites, except voyageurs on the way to the Wisconsin River.

This description and the fact of the large burial ground on the County line, also the numerous fire places that were opened up when when Joe Halfman installed a water system in his barn leads us to believe that Calumetville was the location of the first Menominee village

They also had a village on Lot 125 and Lot 126 Town of Brothertown which we believe they used as a winter camp for it was an ideal place for such purpose. A high wooded ridge was just west of the camp, which would protect them from the wind and also gave them a plentiful supply of wood. Water was supplied by a very large spring, east was open country to the Manitowoc River, a distance of about 80 rods. An old Brothertown Indian remembers of seeing

Calumet Pipe of Peace

a large log with five or six spots burned into it, to form mortars in which to grind their corn, at this camp.

Mr Hoerth who owns part of the land where the old village stood has found some copper tools and other relics.

There is a good ford across the Manitowoc
River with a rock bottom at this place.
It must have been built by the Indians
as all the rest of the river bottom is muck and swamp.

That pipe is of a red stone, as bigge as a fist and as long as a hand. The small reede as long as five foot in breath, and of the thickness of a thumb. There is tyed to it the tayle of an eagle all painted over with severall coulours and open like a fan, or like that makes a kind of a wheel when he shutes:
below the toppe of the steeke is covered with feathers of duck and other birds that are of a fine colour.

Every one smoaked his pipe of tobacco, nor they never goe with out it. During the while there was a great silence.

From Radisson Diary - 1661 - Upper Wisconsin

Break the red stone from this quarry,
Mould and make it into Peace-Pipes,
Take the reed that grows beside you,
Deck them with your brightest feathers,
Smoke the Calumet together,
And as brothers live henceforward!

(35) - Lot 17

A large Menominee burial ground was located on the west side of Highway 151 where the present Steffes Garage stands. It used to be quite a pronounced gravel knoll but in 1900 a gravel pit was opened and since then there is little left of the original burial ground. In 1900, they uncovered 45 Indian graves and many more in later years.

They were buried in shallow graves in a sitting position. The majority were facing West. I have a small pipe that I found in one of the graves, it is of clay and very crude.

It must have been a very old cemetery as most of the bones were badly decayed.

Was pleased with the school and also with Miss Lee. She possesses much of the missionary spirit. Preached in the afternoon and again the next day a funeral discourse on the occasion of six of their Nation who were drowned a short time previous.

It was a solemn, mournful season!

He also wrote a good description of the church. It was made of logs hewn on both sides, about 8 inches thick, the ends dovetailed together, crevices filled with mortar. It had a smooth and pleasing appearance within and without. It had logs seats, and ^{the altar} was a hewn piece of log. Had a seating capacity of 150 people and standing room for 100 more.

Her husband was murdered by two Stockbridge returning home from Green Bay, on July him the jug of whiskey he was carrying.

He refused and in the fight that followed he was hit on the head with an axe and killed. The Konkapots were placed in custody and locked up in the Millhouse at Brothertown where I now live. A trial was held by the Brothertown and Stockbridge tribe and they were sentenced to be hung on Oct ²⁴, 1836 at the lake shore between the dividing line of the two Reservations but some time before the first of Oct, friend of theirs from the Stockbridge Tribe liberated them and they disappeared.

murder was committed by two young men belonging to this nation a year ago last July "1836" upon the body of a Brothertown Indian in a drunken frolic. They were afterward tried by a joint council of the two nations, convicted and sentenced to be executed upon the gallows. But by the assistance of their friends succeeded soon after in making their escape. This affair gave rise to a very serious difficulties both amongst the people and in the church as some of the friends of the murderers were members.

History of Northern Wisconsin 1881
Davo / 193

The tragedy occurred July 3, 1836, at the house of Peter and Jacob Konkopot, two Stockbridge Indians. They had already reduced to small measure an immoderate supply of whiskey, when Joseph Palmer, a Brothertown Indian, in company with another of his tribe and a white man, entered their cabin. The latter party had just returned from the Fox River with a full jug of "fire water" being then an unknown commodity of sale in Calumet Co. They drank several times, but with this fresh supply the Konkopots loud demands for more continued and increased beyond the bounds of reason or considerate fellowship. Palmer therefore refused to be robbed further of his "Fourth of July", whereupon he and his comrades were assaulted by their crazed and unreasonable companions, one wielding an ax and the other a club. Being unarmed the former were unable to defend themselves. Palmer was literally hacked and beaten to pieces. The other two escaped. Without going into details, the murderers were arrested, tried in October before a Commission chosen from both tribes, and sentenced to be hanged near the dividing line between the two Reservations.

On the day preceding that fixed for the execution, "October 24, 1836" they escaped across Lake Winnebago in a boat furnished by friends and were never recaptured.

In 1816 a mission was established at Oneida Castle by Bishop Hobart and Rev Eleazar Williams, the putative son of Thomas Williams a distinguished Mohawk chief of the St Regis tribe was placed in charge. Mr Williams was a descendant of Rev John Williams, who with his family and parishioners were made captives by the Indians at Deerfield, Mass in 1704. He was liberally educated, and officiated as lay reader, Catechist and school teacher. His labors were eminently successful, and resulted in conversion to Christianity of a large number of those who had hitherto been known as pagan party.

January 25, 1817 they sent Gov De Witt Clinton an address adopted in council and signed by eleven of the head men of the nation, and expressed a desire to be known as the Second Christian Party of the Oneida Nation. In 1818, this party sold a piece of land for the erection of a chapel, which was dedicated as St Peters Church, Sept 21, 1819 by Bishop Hobart, who confirmed in all five hundred persons connected with this mission. Mr Williams removed to Green Bay with a portion of the nation, and was succeeded in the mission here, in 1822 by Solomon Davis, who removed who removed to the same place with another portion

The Chapel was removed to Vernon in 1840

Mr Williams was at one time the subject of considerable speculation as to his being heir to the throne of France. It was said, and an effort was made to prove, that he was the lost Dauphin, the son of Louis XVI, whose fate was enshrouded in mystery - From "Hammond's History of Madison County"

They were supplied at first by missionaries from among their own race, educated for the purpose, among whom were William and John Doxtator from Canada. Rev Dan Barnes was their first white preacher after the establishment of the Methodist mission. He remained with them three years, and was the instrument of a revival more powerful than any they had hitherto experienced. The morals of the people, which had hitherto been sadly neglected were now assiduously cultivated

The first Methodist mission chapel was built at the Orchard in the south west corner of Vernon, and it, together with the land, was sold in 1833, by the company of Indians who removed in that year to Green Bay.

Another house was soon erected in the same locality, near their burying ground. About the same time the "Windfall" party built a meeting house, about three miles south of Oneida Castle, in the town of Lenox.

"The Orchard was named from an old and very large orchard in the southwest corner of Vernon, which was set out by the Indians long before the first ^{white} settlers came in, at which time it was said to have been an old orchard. Hence it the Indians living in that locality are known as the Orchard Party"

Brothertown Indians

The Brothertown Indians were adopted by the Oneidas during the latter half of the eighteen century. They located mostly upon and near the Oriskany in the town of Marshall, Oneida Co. They derived their name from the fact of their being a union of many tribes or brothers.

Having no common language, they adopted that of the English. Rev Samson Occum, a highly educated Mohegan Indian was a celebrated preacher in this tribe, with whom he remained many years in that capacity. He visited England to solicit aid for the Indian school at Lebanon, Conn. and while there was the recipient of many marked favors, occupying the pulpits of the "noblest chapels in the Kingdom" including Whitfield's and the chapel of Georgette, before whom he preached, and ~~where~~ by whom he was presented with a gold mounted cane, which he carried during his subsequent life. He possessed a cultivated mind and pleasing manners, and was often called upon by the early settlers to preach, attend funerals and solemnize marriages.

The murder was not discovered until a week after, when the corpse nearly eaten by rats was found by distant neighbors frozen solidly to the bloody floor. property was found in his possession.

He then admitted his crime and when about to be hanged, confessed to a second murder, committed at De Rue.

This was the first murder of a white man, the trial of the prisoner being conducted by the Stockbridge Indians

Through all this blood shed, the Mill at Brothertown continued to run peacefully on. In 1840 Daniel Whitney, of Green Bay, did for Stockbridge what Mr. Manw had done for Brothertown. But the outcome was different. He erected a grist mill and operated a store in connection with it. The Stockbridges not so prudent or so fortunate as their contemporaries, became involved in debt. Many of their farms were sold to white settlers and in fact this seems to be the turning point backwards in their prosperity as an Indian tribe.

Daniel Whitney erected his mill on Lot 23, Town of Stockbridge. On Feb 22, 1844 the mill dam, mill, like and 5 acres of land was conveyed to him by Jacob Chicks to whom the lot was allotted, and also on the same date Joseph L. Chick gave a warranty deed to Whitney for the mill race two rods now width. Jacob Chick sold him 7 acres of land in lot 23 for the mill site and store on the same date. Whitney must have erected his mill and store on the Stockbridge Reservation four years before he could get a legal title.

Stockbridge Indians

The Stockbridge Indians, who derived their name from that of their native home in Mass., were ministered to by Rev. John Sergeant, who came with them and established a church immediately after their settlement at Stockbridge.

Sixteen of the four hundred and twenty composing the tribe, constituted the original membership of this church. Mr. Sergeant regularly spent six months of the year at New Stockbridge till 1796 when he removed here with his family and continued to reside with them till his death, Sept 7, 1824, having served these Indians as missionary for thirty-six years. In 1796 the Legislature granted him a patent for a mile square adjoining Stockbridge, which was presented to him by the Indians. In 1818 about one fourth of the tribe removed to the west. In 1821, the Six Nations, together with the Stockbridge, St Regis and Menominee tribes purchased of the Menominees and Winnebagoes a large tract of land upon Green Bay and the Winnebago and Fox rivers in Wis. In 1822, a large part of the tribe remaining removed to that territory, and the rest soon followed. There they have made considerable advances in civilization, and are generally sober and industrious.

We copy from Mrs. Hammonds History of Madison County the following sketch of the illustrious "Shenandoah" which originally appeared in Jones Oneida:

"the name which stands more prominent upon the page of history, and which will be remembered until the original inhabitants of this continent are forgotten, is that of Shenandoah, the white man's friend."

He was born about the year 1706, but of his younger days little or nothing is known. It has been stated, but upon what authority the writer does not know, that he was not an Oneida by birth, but was a native of a tribe living a long distance to the northwest and was adopted by the Oneidas when a young man.

In his youth and early manhood, Shenandoah was very savage and intemperate. In 1755 while attending a treaty in Albany, he became excessively drunk at night, and in the morning found himself divested of all his ornaments and clothing. His pride revolting at his self-degradation, he resolved never again to place himself under the power of fire-water, a resolution which it is believed he kept to the end of his life.

In appearance he was noble, dignified and commanding, being in height much over six feet, and the tallest Indian in his nation. He possessed a powerful frame, for at the age of eighty five he was a full match for any member of his tribe, either as to strength, or speed on foot; his powers of endurance were equal to his size and physical power. But it was to his eloquence and mental powers, he owed his reputation and influence. His person was tattooed or marked in a peculiar manner. There were nine lines arranged by threes extending downward from each shoulder, and meeting upon the chest, made by introducing some dark coloring matter under the skin.

He was, in his riper years, one of the noblest counselors among the North American tribes; he possessed a vigorous mind, and was alike sagacious, active and persevering. As an enemy he was terrible - as a friend and ally he was mild and gentle in his disposition and faithful to his engagements. His vigilance once preserved from ~~massacre~~ the inhabitants of the little settlement of German Flats; and in the Revolutionary war his influence induced the Oneidas to take up arms in favor of the Americans.

Soon after Mr Kirkland established his mission at Oneida, Shenandoah embraced the doctrines of the gospel, and for the rest of his life he lived a consistent Christian. He often repeated the wish that he might be buried by the side of his old teachers and spiritual father; that he might go up with him at the great resurrection; and several times in the latter years of his life he made the journey from Oneida to Clinton hoping to die there.

Although he could speak but little English, and in his extreme old age was blind, yet his company was sought. In conversation he was highly decorous, evincing that he had profited by seeing civilized and polished society in his better days.

He evinced constant care not to give pain by any remark or reply. — To a friend who called upon him a short time before his decease, he thus expressed himself by an interpreter:

"I am an aged hemlock; the winds of a hundred winters have whistled through my branches; I am dead at the top. The generation to which I belong has run away and left me; why I live the Great Good Spirit only knows; pray to my Jesus that I may have patience to wait for my appointed time to die" —

After listening to the prayers read at his bedside by his great-grand daughter, Shenandoah yielded up his spirit of the 10th day of March 1816, aged about one hundred and ten years. Agreeably to a promise made by the family of Mr Kirkland, his remains were brought to Clinton, and buried by the side of his spiritual father. Services were attended in the Congregational meeting house in Clinton and an address ~~and~~ was made to the Indians by Dr Backus, President of Hamilton College, interpreted by Judge Dean; and after prayer and singing appropriate psalms, the corpse was carried to the grave, proceeded by the students of the college, and followed in order by the Indians, Mr. Kirkland and family, Judge Dean, Rev. Dr. Norton, Rev. Mr. Ayles, officers of the college and citizens.

Shenandoah was buried in the garden of Mr. Kirkland a short distance south of the road leading up to the college. A handsome monument stands in the college burying ground, with the following inscription: —

Shenandoah. This monument is erected by the Northern Missionary Society in testimony of their respect for the memory of Shenandoah who died in peace and hope of the Gospel, on the 11th of March 1816. Wise, eloquent and brave, he long swayed the councils of his tribe, whose confidence and affection he eminently enjoyed. In the war which placed the Canadas under Great Britain, he was actively engaged against the French; in that of the Revolution he espoused that of the Colonies, and ever afterwards remained a firm friend of the United States.

Under the ministry of Rev. Mr. Kirkland he embraced the doctrines of the gospel; and having exhibited their power in a long life, adorned by every Christian virtue, he fell asleep in Jesus at the advanced age of 100 years.

Rev. Samuel Kirkland

Rev. Samuel Kirkland was for many years a distinguished missionary among the Oneidas. He was born in Norwich, Conn., Dec., 1741 and educated at Dr. Wheelock's Indian School. In 1761 he was sent to the Mohawk Indians to learn their language. He entered Princeton College in 1762 and in 1764 returned to the Mohawk country to teach school and perfect himself in that language. He received his collegiate degree in 1765, and in that and the following year was employed among the Senecas. July 9, 1766 he was ordained at Lebanon as an Indian missionary, and in July following took up his residence at Oneida Castle, continuing to labor among that tribe for forty years.

In the summer of 1769, he married in Conn. Jerusha Bingham, an excellent to his chosen field of labor. He acquired great influence over the Oneidas, who was thus deterred from taking sides against the Colonists during the Revolutionary war, during which he was in the employ of the United States as Chaplain. In 1779 he was Brigade Chaplain in General Sullivan's campaign against the Indians in western N.Y. At the close of the war he remained with the Oneidas and in 1788 assisted at the great Indian council for the extinction of their title to the Genesee country. The Oneidas made him the recipient of a tract of land, and so sensible was the state government of the value of his services that in 1789, it granted him a tract of land two miles square in the town of Kirkland, whither he removed. In 1792, he made a liberal endowment of land for the purpose of forming a school, which was originally called ~~Hamilton~~ Hamilton

Oneida Academy and was incorporated as Hamilton College, May 26, 1812.

He died after a life of much public usefulness
Feb 28, 1808. He was a noble man, the friend of his race, both red man and white, and a long line of good deeds proclaim his zeal and liberality in promoting the interest of religion and learning. His labors among the Oneidas were in many instances attended with happy results; a large portion of the nation espousing the Christian religion while he was with them, among them the great chief Shenandoah.

One of the students, David Fowler, a aptitude for agriculture, and it was Dr

Indian teacher in March, 1765 and set out accordingly for Oneida Nation on the 29th of April. He shortly wrote Dr. Wheelock the following letter from his new residence:-

Kanawarohare in Oneida April 5, 1765

"Honored and Rev Sir:— This is the twelfth day since I began my school; eight of my scholars are now in the third page of their spelling book. I never saw children exceed these in learning. The number of my scholars is twenty six but it is difficult to keep them together; they are often roving from place to place to get something to live upon. I am also teaching a singing school. They take great pleasure in learning to sing. We can already carry three parts of several tunes. I am well contented to live here, so long as I am in such great business, I believe I shall persuade the men in this castle, at least some of them, to labor the year. They begin now to see that they could live better if they cultivated their lands than they do now by hunting and fishing.

I ask the continuance of your prayers that God would give me grace, and fill my heart with love of God and compassion to perishing souls; and that God would make me an instrument of winning many souls; ~~and that God bring~~ to Christ; before I leave this world.

Please to accept much love and respect, from your affectionate and unworthy pupil,

The famine which visited Western N. Y. this year obliged the Oneidas to remove in search of food to another quarter, and David Fowler returned to New England for further aid. — He is stated to have been alive in 1811 at Oneida, an industrious farmer and a useful man.

He died March 31, 1807, aged 72 at Broctontown N.Y. Was Senior Peacemaker from 1796 to 1807. A Trustee of the Broctontown Tribe in 1785. Had nine children. His wife was Hannah Garrett, a daughter of the noted Miantlic chief Harmon Garrett.

They came in soon after 1800 and remained till the Indian lands were sold to the State when the remnant dispersed.

Albert G. Ellis

One of the best known of the American pioneers of ~~the~~ Green Bay and the valley of the upper Wisconsin River, was born in New York State in 1800. At the age of sixteen he entered a printing office as apprentice and three years later was engaged by Elzager Williams as secretary and assistant. He visited Green Bay with the latter in 1821 and next year came to remain, being appointed catechist and lay reader by the Episcopal church. Under their auspices he began a school at Green Bay. In 1827 he was appointed inspector of provisions, and the following year deputy surveyor. In 1830 Ellis accompanied an Indian delegation to Washington and was again surveying from 1833 to 1836. In 1837 he was made surveyor-general of the Territory of Wisconsin and was a member of Territorial Legislature in 1836 and 1841-44 and once acted as speaker. In 1845 he became sub-agent for the Chippewas and in 1853 receiver for the northern Wis. land office, whereupon he removed to Stevens point. General Ellis was one of the first editors in the state

Daniel Whitney

Was born in New Hampshire in 1795 and visited Green Bay at the beginning of American occupation in 1816 to look over the prospects of the new country. In 1819 he returned with a stock of goods and opened a store at Green Bay. For many years he was the most enterprising and active promoter in this. He founded the lumbering industry on the upper W. Wis. River; built the shot tower at old Helena; laid out town sites, and carried on numerous enterprises in all portions of the state, giving employment to many men, transportation facilities, etc. Whitney was averse to holding public office, and attended only to his private enterprises. At Green Bay he laid out the site of Marquette, where he lived until his death, Nov. 4, 1862. He was a vestryman of the Episcopal church, and benevolent in his disposition and habits.

Joseph Jourdain

Was born at Three Rivers, Canada, in 1780 and came to this in 1798. He was the village blacksmith, and in 1820 entered a claim for land which was confirmed. His house stood until 1884 when it was destroyed by fire.

In 1823 he was appointed blacksmith for the Agency and in 1834 removed in that capacity to Winnebago Rapids, near Little Lake Butte Des Morts, where he thenceforth made his home. He died in 1866 while on a visit to Green Bay and is buried at Allouez.

He married in 1803 Marguerite Gravelle, by whom he had eight children. His daughter Madeline became the wife of Eleazer Williams. Another daughter Christine married Paul, son of Augustin Grignon.

He was a clever silversmith and converted silver dollars into silver table ware. Mrs Ross Grignon has shown me samples of his work and they were beautiful "O & T."

Plan for Brothertown School House at Brothertown, New York built in 1796

We are of the opinion that the logs be collected and sawed into pieces about 4 or five inches thick and as wide as the Timber will admit of, to be placed on top of each other and joined and dovetailed together. The building then to be boarded on the outside, with boards to stand upright, not lengthwise, these boards may be planed so as they can be painted if thought necessary at a future day.

The roof to be shingled, the lower pieces of the building to be Pitch Pine or White Oak to prevent decay. The house should stand above 18 inches from the ground underpinned with Bricks or stone and till this can be done it may remain perhaps till next year supported on Blocks.

The Floor should be Pitch Pine plank or if not to be had of White Oak and sealed above with boards. The Floor and ceiling should be grooved but need not be planed.

Plan of Building

Nine feet high in the clear.

Door in the middle of the Front and two windows each side.

Timber

Chilton Times, Feb, 22, 1873

The largest stick of hewn timber ever brought to this village was hauled here on Saturday evening. It was brought from the farm of John Forkin Jr., two miles west of this village. "Chilton" was owned by T. McCarthy, hewed by good workmen and measured 58 ft in length and squared 28 x 34 inches.

Chilton Times, March 8, 1873

A stick of timber was recently cut down and hewed on the farm of Geo. S. Breech, near the village. It squared 36 inches and was 40 ft long. Were it not for a blunder made in falling the tree, the stick up to the limbs would have measured 61 ft. At one time this monarch of the forest was ably addressed by Gen. Hobart in his usual eloquent style on account of its size and beauty.

One day last week Carl Darling and another person clubbed a bear to death in a cedar swamp near Hayton. He was a whopper in size. Landlord Wilhelm of Hayton purchased the hide.

Electa Guinney and Daniel Adams

Although because of his modesty he may never have revealed the fact to his white friends, Antigo was for several years the home of a man who was the son of Wisconsin's first Protestant missionaries and also of one of the state's earliest teachers of a free public school. He was John Clark Adams, who died at his home in the town of Antigo Jan 2, 1896. His father was Daniel Adams and his mother before her marriage was Electa Cole S. Hobson.

Antigo Daily Journal, Dec 9, 1848

The Rev. Daniel Adams, a Mohawk Indian from Canada visited the Stockbridge Settlement at Lanesburg, now South Lanesboro, in 1832, with Rev. John Clark and conducted services. Both are said to have been Methodist. When the Rev. Mr. Clark left he placed Daniel Adams in charge of the congregation, and Electa Guinney in charge of the school and Sunday school. In the summer of 1833 the two were married.

The "History of Methodism in Wisconsin" mentions Daniel Adams, saying that the Oneida mission continued to grow in members and future promise under the care of Daniel Adams.

Adams died in Indian Territory

Electa Guinney spent six years in the famous foreign Mission school at Cornwall, Conn., and had part of her education at Clinton, N.Y.. She taught her own people in that state before coming to Wisconsin.

The first settlement of Stockbridge Indians was begun in 1822 on the south east side of the Fox River, 21 miles from Green Bay, near Grand Kaukaulin, "Big Rapids". It was given the name of Statesburg.

There is some discrepancy in the dates for the opening of Miss Guinney's free school. According to one source it was in 1828 and according to another in 1832. It may be that she was teaching in the mission school then serving Indians only, on the earlier date.

An addenda to the book "Wah-he-ka-ne-oh" published in 1893 by J. N. Davidson is the following tribute to Electa Guinney.

"The Hon. L. Miner of Neenah, one of her pupils says that she was a better teacher than the average of teachers of today. Her methods, many of them were similar to those of the present day. The pupils were mostly Indian children, but the language used was English. Daboll and Smith arithmetic, Webster's spelling book, the old English reader, Columbian orator and Woodbridge's geography were her text books. There was no Wisconsin then, all Michigan, on both sides of the lake. The Indians were poor in mathematics but excelled in penmanship. She rarely whipped; opened her school with prayer. It was modeled after the best public schools of New England at that time. Sixty three years find great improvements in the school system in Wis. but whether a child at present gets any better knowledge of elementary branches during the first ten than he did then is to be doubted."

The Rev. E. S. Miner was a member of Wis. state Senate in 1871-72, and son of Rev. Jesse Miner, first religious instructor of the Stockbridges at Statesburg.

The claim that Electa Guinney was the first school teacher in Wisconsin is not made by Mr. Davidson, however. In his ~~new~~ "Unnamed Wisconsin", he notes that a Caronne Russel was imported from the east in 1828 to teach the children of five American families in Shanty town, now part of Green Bay.

In his "Mun-he-ka-ne-ok" he says that according to the information available, the first Wisconsin teacher was Jean Baptiste Jacobs. He was an English fur trader who came to Green Bay in 1800 having lost all his property in Canada, through the perfidy of his brother. He attempted to regain his fortune in the fur trade, but in this he was not successful and opened a school about 1800.

According to Margaret Gleason, Reference Librarian of the Wis. Hist. Society, records for the very early days of this are at times inadequate when it is a matter of establishing a fact. At many of the principal forts, "post schools" provided instruction for children of officers, soldiers and prominent citizens. The school at Fort Prairie du Chien, for example, was providing instruction as early as 1817.

The Quinney family was one of the most notable in Stockbridge-Munsee history.

One John Quinney was assistant to Rev. John Sergeant who is credited with translation of the shorter, "Westminster" catechism into Mohekanmuck, the Stockbridge language.

A son was made ~~sachem~~ chief of the tribe in 1777. The original form of the name Quinney was Quan-awksaunt.

John W. Quinney born in 1797, grandson of a soldier of the Revolution, was educated in a high school at Yorktown, N.Y. He was one of the master spirits in moving his people to the Green Bay region, and for many years was the business agent of his people as John C. Adams was later. After the treaty of 1832, he accompanied his people from Statesburg to Stockbridge, Calumet Co. He was elected grand sachem of his people for a term beginning in 1852. He died at Stockbridge three years later.

In the trunk of John C. Adams discovered on the W.H. Sawley premises several years ago was an itemized store statement of J.W. Quinney in account with Daniel Whitney, prominent Green Bay pioneer, dated 1833.

A portrait of John W. Quinney was presented to the State Historical society by his sister Mrs. Electa H. Candy.

Austin Quinney was another prominent member of the family.

Concerning Electa Quinney, Sept 7 Henry Sverin of New Holstein, Calumet Co wrote;
"She was highly respected by the whites and moved in the best society at Ft Howard.
She married Daniel Adams, a Methodist clergyman, at that time a missionary to the Oneidas and spoken of as a pious and intelligent man. With him she moved to Missouri, where he became pastor of a band of Senecas. After his death she became the wife of a Cherokee editor, "Candy's" with whom after some years, she returned to her home in Stockbridge which her son has lately sacrificed in order to push a claim that his kinsmen believe they have against the United States."

The son referred to is John Clark Adams of whom the Langlade County Special of Feb 1, 1896 said in his death notice that "he even mortgaged his farm to pay his expenses" in the service of his people.

According to Otto E. Heller of Chilton R. 3 who lives at Stockbridge[?] and who is a student of Stockbridge and Brothertown lore, on her return to her old home community

Electa Quinney located on a farm two miles south of the village. There she died in June 1885
she is buried in the old Stockbridge cemetery three quarters of a mile north of Stockbridge

Presumably John Clark Adams is buried in the same cemetery as his body was sent from Antigo to Stockbridge for burial. While there is no direct evidence to that effect, a Clark Adams who died in Antigo in 1896 several months after John & was buried at Stockbridge, is believed to have been a brother.

John or Jean Baptiste Jacobs taught a

Brothertown Settlement
at Little Kacesslin, "Little Rapids"

From the report of Samuel Stambaugh, U.S. Indian Agent Green Bay, 1831-1832, Indian Agency Green Bay Nov. 8, 1831

"There has been no settlement made here by any of the New York Tribes, claiming under purchase made from the Menominees, other than those I have mentioned. About twenty of the Brothertown tribe arrived here this fall, ¹⁸³¹ and have commenced a settlement at Little Kacesslin, on the river, a distance less than two hundred yards, they could have settled upon land set apart for them by the Treaty made last winter, - I advised them to do so on account of their own comfort and safety, and strove to convince them that "their conduct in settling upon land in direct opposition to the provisions of the Treaty, which had already received the sanction of the President, and had been laid before the Senate, would be construed as a disregard of the authority of the Government, and might be prejudicial to their interests. They replied, that they had their "own boundaries" and would settle where they pleased on any land which had been obtained originally from the Menominees, by the New York Tribes,

Fox River

and which they afterwards had purchased.

They are now erecting huts at this place and appear determined to retain their position.

The principal Menominee chiefs have earnestly demanded the removal of the Brothertowns. They appeared much exasperated at first, and it was with difficulty they could be restrained from using force to remove the intruders. I assured the Menominees that the removal of the stranger Indians upon this land would not impair their treaty stipulation with the U. S. nor diminish the kind feeling entertained toward them by the government, but that, should the Treaty be ratified by the Senate, all its provisions would be carried into effect. With this assurance the ^{chiefs} left me apparently satisfied, although some of their finest sugar Camps are on land occupied by the Brothertown Indians, which will be much injured if not entirely destroyed by their settlement.

The Fox River has a fall of only four inches to the mile from Oshkosh to Portage but has a fall of 170 ft. from Neenah to Depere, the greatest fall being in the nine mile stretch between Appleton upper lock and Kaukaunas lower lock which is 134 ft.

There are 17 locks, situated as follows on the Lower Fox:

Neenah-Menasha	1 lock	8.6 fall
Appleton	4 locks	35.5 fall
Kimberly	1 lock	9.7 fall
Little Chute	1 lock	14.4 fall
Combined Locks	2 locks	21.8 fall
Kaukauna	5 locks	50.0 fall
Rapide Croche	1 lock	8.6 fall
Little Kaukauna	1 lock	7.0 fall
Depere	1 lock	9.0 fall

There are seven on the Upper Fox, Eureka, Berlin, White River, Princeton, Grand River, Montello, Governor Bend, Ft Winnebago, and Portage City.

The canal was completed in 1856 but would not accommodate boats of more than three foot draught. The Aquila started from Pittsburgh that year, following the Ohio to

to the Mississippi then up the Wisconsin then down the Fox to Green Bay. She was was the first boat to use the canal

There were 67 steamboats built in the Fox River Valley between the years 1844 to 1908 for use on the Fox River and Lake Winnebago. The Manchester built at Brothertown and Taycheedah being the first.
Twenty one were built between the years

O. S. Fowler

Son of Samuel White and Sally (Brown)
Marsh, was born in Danville, Vermont July 29, 1805.
His given name was derived from his paternal Grandfather's maternal grandfather, Cutting Moody. The early years of our subject were passed upon his father's farm.
From 1819 to 1822 he spent in preparation for college at Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass.
He graduated from Dartmouth College in 1826, he was licensed to preach by the Andover Association of Congregational ministers; and on Sept. 24, 1829 was ordained as a foreign missionary at Park Street Church in Boston. In October, he departed for his field of labor among the Stockbridge Indians of the Northwest, as a missionary of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions.

Reaching Detroit on his way to Green Bay
November 1, 1830, he found that the last boat for the season had been gone for two months.
Accordingly he went to Maumee, Ohio, where there was a mission among the Ottawas.
Here he spent the winter. In the ensuing spring he started for Green Bay, which point

he reached Friday, April 30, 1830. Upon the very next day he traveled by boat up the Fox River to the station of the Stockbridges at Grand Kakalin, then called Statesburg and now known as South Kaukouna. Although he reached his destination late at night and very weary, he preached the next day, (Sunday May 1, 1830) his first sermon to his new charge.

When in consequence of the treaty of the U. S. with the Menominee Nation of Oct, 27, 1832 and the acceptance of the new cession, proposed by said treaty, by the Stockbridges and other New York Indians, the Stockbridges removed to their new lands, Marsh accompanied his people.

On Nov. 2, 1837, Marsh married at Stockbridge, Lucretia Olmey of Buffalo, N. Y. born in 1798 at Whitestown, N. Y. She had taught among the Ojibways at Fort Gratiot from 1821 to 1824, and from 1824 until about the time of her marriage, as a teacher in a mission school at Wausau.

Marsh's labors for the Stockbridges continued until the American Board discontinued its work among them in 1848

"Presbyterian
O. E. H."

He preached his final sermon under the Board, at Se Pe, Oct. 27, 1848. Marsh reported frequently of his work and of the condition and characteristics of his Indian charge to the American Board and also to the Society for Propagating Christian Knowledge of Edinburgh, Scotland, which latter Society also gave aid to the Stockbridge mission.

From 1848 for about three years Marsh was a home missionary in Northern Wis., with Green Bay as his home. In 1851 he removed to Waupaca, situated on an Indian reservation, the land of which had just been opened for settlement.

He died at Waupaca July 4, 1873. His wife, who had been his wife and faithful helper, died Dec. 27, 1855.

A photograph of cutting Marsh may be seen in Wisconsin Historical Collections Vol. XV

Extracts from the annual report of Cutting Marsh to the Society for Propagating
Christian Knowledge, Edinburgh Scotland
Concerning the Brothertown Nation

The report of 1842 again mentions a remaining mentioning the Brothertown

Stockbridge near Green Bay, Wis Fev. June 1841

"There was an interesting revival of religion amongst the Brothertown Indians on a Reservation South of this last winter, under the labors of the Methodist and some fifty or more indulged hopes of having passed from death into life."

Scottish Report for 1846, May!

The Brothertown Indians are making progress in enlarging their farms which are cleared up from the thick forest. They number about 4 hundred. Schools are regularly taught in the town during Summer and Winter and habits of sobriety appear to be gradually gaining ground.

They have a Methodist Missionary residing amongst them, and a Methodist Church has been gathered as the fruit of Missionary labor amongst them, numbering 100 members. The Oneida tribe lives between 30 and 40 miles distant, and there are 730 in the settlement.

They are making progress in clearing up farms and in building comfortable homes but make little progress if any in moral and intellectual improvement

Milwaukee, Feb. 23, 1856

Sir: I have the honor to enclose a treaty with the Stockbridges and Munsees, concluded in conformity to your instructions. In consequence of the complicated difficulties at Stockbridge, and the factious spirit ruling among the Indians, the task imposed upon me was not an easy one, and required extraordinary patience and forbearance. I believe I have used all proper means to make the arrangements contemplated by the treaty as acceptable to all parties interested as could be expected under the circumstances. However, about one fifth of the Indians, headed by Austin L. Gunney and mostly consisting of members of the Gunney family, did not sign the treaty, but without giving any sensible reason. The only two objections raised by Austin L. Gunney to the draft of the treaty were: First, That the issue of patents to land, to be apportioned to the individuals of the tribe, was contemplated.

This objection was virtually obviated by amending the treaty, so that the application for a patent to be made after ten years, has first to be consented to by the general council of the Stockbridges and Munsees

His second objection was, that there was no provision made for the payment of a claim he himself has against the tribe. Though I invited him to submit the claim to me for examination, he did not do so, and, from what I learned from himself and others, it appears that it would, if submitted, not bear very accurate examination, as about half of it is made up of high charges for meals furnished councillors of the Stockbridges, and the other half for funds advanced to a certain Chamber, on his share of the twenty thousand dollars, to be paid under the amendment of the treaty of 1848 for procuring the adoption of said amendment.

The real objection on the part of the Tunneys to the reorganization of the Stockbridges and Munsees under this treaty is, no doubt, the certainty staring them in the face, that their rule over the tribe will be at an end if the treaty is ratified. To show what use this family has made of their power over the tribe, I will only mention a few instances.

Though claiming to hold their lands again in commonalty in consequence of the law of Aug 6, 1846, Austin L. Tunney, by barter and trade carried on with widows and other Indians, and by advancing to them a few provisions, pretended to have bought their lots of land, and, under the treaty of 1848, he not only received pay for the improvements on all these lands, (440 acres, $2,760, (3), but of the sixteen thousand five hundred dollars paid under V. article of the treaty of 1848, he received $3,083, while under a proper per capita apportionment, the share of his family would not have been much more than about three hundred dollars. The interest of the $16,500, to be paid "as other annuities are paid by the United States," has been apportioned in direct violation of said treaty until the Stockbridge affairs came under my superintendence, in the same manner as the $16,500, under art. V. had been paid; and for the benefit of Sam'l Miller even that illegal apportionment was falsified so as to pay one half of $1668.00 and the interest on the other half instead of $417.50, the proportion to which he would have entitled by the quantity of land held by him at the treaty of 1848.

Austin E. Gunney realized about a thousand dollars more by selling his pretended right of occupancy to lots, so that it appears, that he has received about seven thousand dollars in addition to what he has received of the money paid to his tribe by the State of New York, and it is no doubt mortifying to him that his share of moneys hereafter, is to be no larger than that of any other member of the tribe. A great part of the funds received from the State of New York has been used by Gunney family for their own aggrandizement and the sending of delegations to Washington; and the wishes of a majority of the Stockbridges in relation to the application of those funds have been frequently disregarded, and at the present time Sam'l Miller has been sent by Austin E. Gunney as a delegate to Washington with a pack of these funds, in direct opposition to the wishes of the majority.

I proposed to Austin E. Gunney and his followers to patent to them lands at Stockbridge, and to make other stipulations favorable to them, if they preferred to remain there and to separate from the tribe; but as they would not declare their willingness to accept such provisions, and as Gunney declares that he would probably desire to remove with the others if the lands to be selected were of good quality, and deeming it more beneficial to them, that they should remove with the others and be settled by themselves, if they preferred it, in some corner of the new reservation, I did not feel prompted to provide for their remaining at Stockbridge, and increased the sums to be paid in proportion to their number.

I made no secret, since my visit to Stockbridge during the forepart of December last, of the arrangements contemplated in relation to lands and land titles of Stockbridge, (Articles X 11 and X 14,) and it appeared generally satisfactory to white settlers; yet there will be always found meddlesome individuals, and it appears that, at the request of a resident of Stockbridge, who, however, has no land himself, a lawyer of Green Bay had drawn up a petition or memorial asking the treaty to be amended.

When I saw the document, no names were attached to it, and I have enquired afterwards, if it has been signed by any body and forwarded, I read it very hastily; but it left the impression on my mind that little legal knowledge was displayed by its author. Since the authority to issue patents, given by the law of 1843 was destroyed by the repealing act of 1846 and the list of patents to lots to be granted under the treaty of 1848, is imperfect and incorrect, the settlers at Stockbridge, if they understand it, will be the last to object to authority being granted ^{the} proper officer, to issue patents; and the investigation of sales made by Indians provided for, I think, will not be seriously objected to, except by such who are afraid that the consideration paid by them would be found to have consisted of whiskey.

The minimum price fixed in the treaty for the land, to be sold by the United States government is not too high nor unjust to any class of the settlers at Stockbridge. Those who settled here shortly after the treaty of 1848, and bought out, for a small consideration, the right of occupancy of Indians, to their houses, clearing, and fields, have since mostly confined themselves to cultivating the fields already made and raised fine crops, without paying any taxes or bearing any of the hardships of a new settlement. It has not been so much by their labor that these lands have become valuable, as by the settlements and improvements made in the surrounding country and the general prosperity of the State. The settlers who have recently squatted on lots of land at Stockbridge, have gone there with the perfect knowledge of the price which was expected to be fixed on those lands, and since it has become known that the treaty was signed, that part of State has been under great excitement, and many have flocked to Stockbridge to make claims and to avail themselves of the privileges contemplated to be extended to actual settlers by the treaty. It is feared that there are even more settlers and claimants than lots of land, and if the price should be reduced, the excitement would, no doubt, become more intense and the land offices would find it more difficult to settle the conflicting claims. The privilege of entering lands at the terms of payment, as prescribed for actual settlers in Art. XIX, granted to a number of Indians by Art XVI, was considered by all as very valuable, which seems to prove beyond a doubt, that the price is considered very moderate. If the petition above referred to has been signed generally by the settlers at Stockbridge, they have done so in consequence of its being represented to them, that it could do no harm to try to get the lands from the government at a less price, and not because the price is too high or unjust to any one of them. A power of attorney of the Munsees of New York to their delegate is herewith enclosed,

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Francis Hebeckman

Early History of the Presbyterian Church among the Stockbridge Indians in this

On the twenty fourth of July, 1818, Rev John Sergeant assembled the tribe in anticipation of pilgrimage to White River, Indiana where they had procured a tract of land from the Miami Indians and intended to make their home.

The old church was dismissed and formed into a new body with eleven of their number, for whom he transcribed the Confession of Faith and Covenant in English, adding in their own language a Covenant especially adapted to their circumstances. On the fifteenth of August following, some having gone, and more being ready to depart, another meeting was held, at which the chief Hendrick Aupawout, in a "large speech" presented to them from the old church a copy of Scott's Bible "to read on Lord's Day and at other religious meetings."

Following are the names and ages of the eleven original members, July 24, 1818

age
62	John Metoxen, Deacon - *Margaret Quinney
56	Robert Konkapot - 64, Elisabeth Bennett
*	Joseph Quinney - 52, Hannah Konkapot
59	John Bennett - 50, Catherine Metoxen
79	Esther Towhusquah - 46, Dolly Now-otokhunavoh

* Mary Tunkapoot

On the way to White River they were favoured with two opportunities whilst passing through Ohio of communing with other churches. But the sacrament was never administered to them, nor they did not having any preaching whilst they remained there which was a period of three or four years: still they met regularly on Sabbath and held public worship amongst themselves, whilst there three members died. In 1822 they removed to Green Bay with the rest of the remaining colony but had no congregational or presbyterian preaching until 1827 when the Rev. Jesse Miner being sent out by the American Board on a exploring tour spent a few weeks with them. Deacon John Metoxen was educated at the Moravian school at Bethlehem, Pa., was an orator of rare power, and frequently preached to his people. He died April 8, 1858, aged 87 years. He was a loyal supporter of the tribal party.

Cutting Marsh wrote, "The deacons of the church John Metoxen and Jacob C. Hicks are interesting and exemplary men and use the office of a Deacon well. The former is at present the head man in the nation. His natural talents are respectable; he is judicious and discerning and perhaps no one possesses more influence in the nation - modest and affectionate but yet decided in his opinions. He is old and gray headed and he looks forward to the time when he must die, this seems to increase his anxiety to do his people good. It is pleasing yet affecting to see and hear him at times addressing his people. He is rather large in stature and comely in his appearance and when he speaks to his people it is like an aged father to his beloved children, whilst tears trickle down his aged cheeks, until his feelings become to big for utterance, still the intensity of his feelings never betray him into anything boisterous or fanatical, whilst he presses upon their mind and consciousness the all important truths of the gospel.

His wife is also a member of the church and adorns her profession.

The Stockbridge Bible

This plan, so like that of the best Indian schools of today, and having elements relating it to the work of John Eliot in the seventeenth century, was matured as early as 1743, and though the Mass. Indian Comm. received wide publicity both in the colonies and in England. Though the times were unpromising, much interest was aroused among philanthropist; Fredick, Prince of Wales, headed a promising subscription list with a gift of twenty guineas, but the French was interfered with the work of collecting enough additional money to justify the immediate opening of the school. The prince had been approached through his chaplain, Rev. Francis Ayscouth, who was personally so deeply moved that he asked Sergeant to receive as a gift from himself to the congregation at Stockbridge a bible he was sending. This was the great book seen by Colton at the Fox River church, "1830" — "Editor's Note"

It was, says Samuel Hopkins in Hist. Memoirs, 122, "one of the largest sort, finely gilt, bound up in three [sic] Vol. large Folio, which nows "1753" adorns the Pulpit at Stockbridge, and is made use of for the Benefit of the Congregation, every Lord's Day". The book was transferred to Stockbridge, Mass., in 1929, through its purchase from the Stockbridge Indians in Wisconsin by Miss Mabel Choate of Boston. It is preserved in the John Sergeant house.
