One page folded in half to create four pages to this letter. On the left side of the front half is what looks like the address to send it to Mr. Henry Fowler, it is written upside down from the first page of content. The letter is written in blue ink and starts "Palmyra, March 20th, Friend Edgar. It talks about a man who just sold his farm and when he finished counting his money, someone stole it through the open window. He asks to come visit him at the lodge on Monday. Signed H.A. Fowler. It has a P.S. asking about why someone repented.

Cond notes	The letter is in good condition with some light staining. It is folded into fourths after the initial half fold and along the creases it is stained, mostly in the middle crease. It looks like it was kept folded and the first page with the address is the dirtiest and most stained of all of it from being the pages on the outside.
