Ronald started kindergarten at Lloyd St. School. He moved to the south side, and went to South Division School but did not graduate. He used to shine shoes. His father owned a tavern in Milwaukee. Ronald worked for a coal company in the winter and did construction in the summer time. Most of the family went to All Saints church. The Consolidate Indian program helped to teach children their culture and ways like traditional dancing, lacrosse, and hoop dancing. Ronald's advice to the youth is to get as much education as you can, respect your parents and your siblings, listen to the elderly, take care of your kids, and do the best you can.
