

Mission Statement Draft

We the descendants of Algonquian speaking people of Long Island and New England have a responsibility and an obligation passed on to us by our ancestors to protect the land and the memory of our ancient communities. No indigenous community in North America has willfully or intentionally disturbed ancient burial sites as other known sacred and consecrated remains. To do so would bring shame and dishonor on us and our descendants.

It is our mission to fulfill the obligation and responsibility given to us by our ancestors to protect the land and those buried underneath it. It is also our mission to educate and promote knowledge regarding the historical and cultural histories of our communities for ourselves and our future generations.
