Historical Notes

The Civic Services Committee, sponsored by the Carolina Art Association, was formally organized in the spring of 1940. Organizing members of the committee included, E. Milby Burton, John Mead Howells, James O'Hear, Homer M. Pace, Sidney J. Rittenberg, Albert Simons, Alice R.H. Smith, Samuel G. Stoney and Robert N. S. Whitelaw. The committee was organized to study the need for practical preservation and planned growth. The Committee received grant funding from the Rockefeller Foundation and the Carnegie Corporation. Funds were used to secure a pilot study of the city by Frederick Law Olmstead Jr. and to compile a comprehensive inventory the city's architecture which resulted in the publication "This is Charleston". Additionally the committee sponsored studies of community growth and proposed a downtown traffic and parking plan.
