

LAST LETTER — Workmen remove the pointing finger and sign that once directed the way from King Street to the YMCA building on George Street—in later years the wrong way, incidentally, down a one-way street. The building at 328 King St. to which the marker was attached is being demolished. Ross E. Chasteen, general secretary of the YMCA, says the sign, 25 to 30 years old and badly in need of repair, probably is down for good because a city ordinance outlaws signs that protrude over streets or sidewalks.
