

her mother, and it was given to Historic Charleston Foundation, by her heirs.

(HCF)

8 Wentworth St. -- John T. Henery built this house in 1850, setting the small structure far back on the deep lot.

(HCF)

10 Wentworth St. -- This brick single house was built c. 1856 by Charles W. Seignious. It has an attached kitchen building.

(HCF)

12 Wentworth St. -- William G. Armstrong, manager of Bennett's Rice Mill on the Cooper River, just to the east of this house, built this three and one-half story brick residence as his home, c. 1853-55. It was sold in 1857 by his heirs, including his son James Campbell Armstrong, a Confederate hero. The principal rooms are raised above a full basement level, with double rooms of about 11 feet ceiling height opening into each other on the south front, where the French windows formerly opened onto a three-tiered piazza. A passage which went through the center of the basement to the garden, has become an enclosed entrance.

(Thomas, DYKYC, Oct. 5, 1970)

15 Wentworth St. -- Christopher Myers built this brick residence c. 1847.

(HCF)

18-20 Wentworth St. -- David Lopez, a member of one of the city's oldest Jewish families and a prominent building contractor, built this double residence c. 1839.

Lopez was one of the contractors for Beth Elohim Synagogue.

(HCF)