Cool.

The first PC you posted features some rarities.

The white station wagon in the foreground is a 1959 Chevrolet. The little green car with a white top in front of Orvin Court is a very rare '53-'54 Willys Aero Sedan. In the parking lot, the first car on the left closest to the camera is a 1960 Chevrolet Impala. Other cars are blurry, but I can make out the white tailfin of a '56 Chevrolet. So, picture is '60 or later.

Second postcard:

Foreground, a 1949 or 1950 Chevrolet Fleetline Sedan. Background, a 1953 Buick. So, '53 or later for this one.

Third postcard (where we started):

The photo is retouched, but the car closest to the camera is a '64-'66 Chrysler Imperial Coupe. '55 Packard and '58 Chevy in the background. So, 1964-66 or later.

Here are four different postcard views of the same hotel.

Kevin, great to hear from you, Karen, nice to meet you.

Yes, send me car stuff anytime.

The car in the foreground is a mid-60's Imperial (Chrysler) coupe. This sounds counter-intuitive, but can you send it to me not-so-blown up?

It looks like there's a '55 Packard Patrician or Packard 400 in there as well.

John -

This is a zoomed in segment of a postcard image showing a hotel on Calhoun Street. The postcard was never mailed and has no date on it, so the age of the image is unclear.

I told Karen Emmons, the archivist at the Historic Charleston Foundation, that you would not only be able to identify the models of cars, but assign a date to them and identify the engine specs.

Any thoughts?

(I also unilaterally told Karen that she should send you other Mystery Car images. The date of the cars in a lot of old photos is the only guide to ballparking their age.)

Kevin
