Hi Sarah,

You do mean the house that's in Georgetown, don't you? Or is there a Stewart-Patrick House here? If so, what is the address?

If Georgetown, there was no info about the house in the Laurens materials but there had been photographs, slides, and negatives that I discovered last fall. When I finally identified the house as being in Georgetown, and believing (based on experience) that no one would be researching a Georgetown house at HCF, I donated them to the more appropriate place, the Kaminski Museum, which oversees the Stewart-Patrick House. So my suggestion would be to contact the woman I sent the photos to (contact info below). I would think that she'd be willing to share them with you.

If you'd rather that I get in touch with her, let me know.

Karen, a very long time ago, Chip Laurens did a project with the Stewart-Parker house. Would you please check and see if there's any info in your archives about it? Connie Baldwin is talking to April about potentially placing an easement on the property. As we've discussed, Chip gave his old files to HCF, but not his photograph negatives.

This is an instance where the old negatives could be very useful. I'm not going to talk to him about it, but wish someone could find out whether he still has the negatives and would part with them.

At any rate, if you've got a trove, I'll come by at your convenience.

Thanks so much,

Sarah
