Interesting!

I was put in contact with a woman who has ties to the Midtown area and has some family photos from the 1970s showing some of the un-gentrified Upper King Street buildings. I asked her if I could get high res scans, and she seemed to indicate that would be fine.

I think she lives downtown, so I'm going to just invite her to my office where we have a fancy copier than can make high-res scans in various formats. What is the industry standard for these things?

Hi Kevin,

I cataloged the photos and was just too curious about what happened with the house. Here are a few of the articles I found. Thought you'd be interested. I'm going to start a property file on 53 S Battery now.

Happy Thursday!

Karen
