

Preservation Progress Stage 6

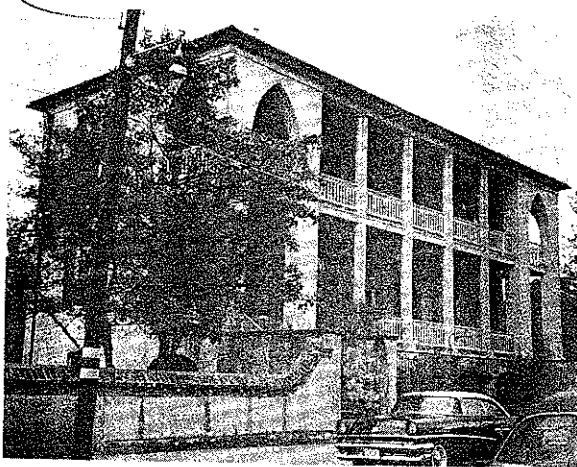

Queen's Row, 22-28 Queen St.
Post-Revolutionary, restored 1950's

98, 96, 94 King

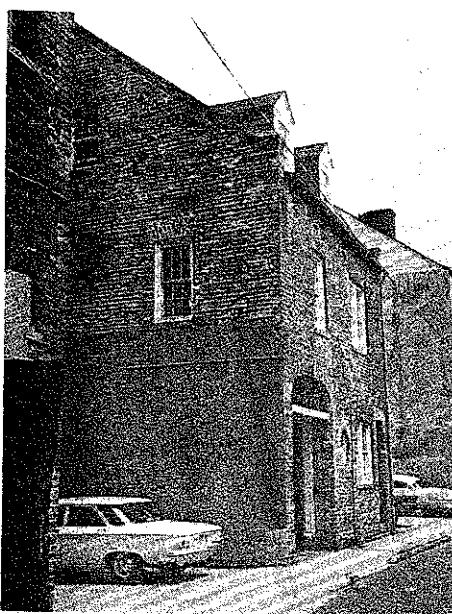

8 Orange
Built 1770

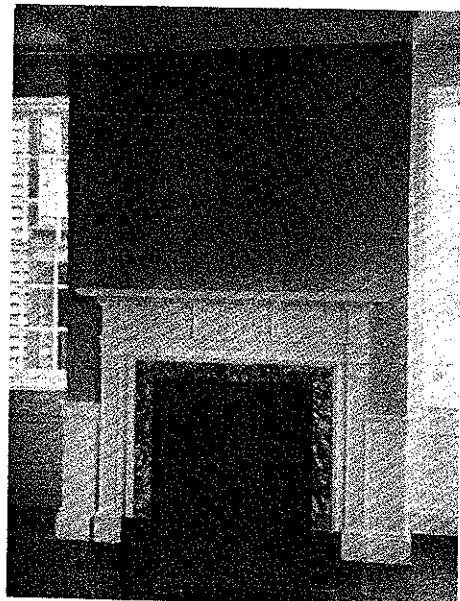

20 Franklin, Marine Hospital
Built 1833, restored 1939
Designed by Robert Mills

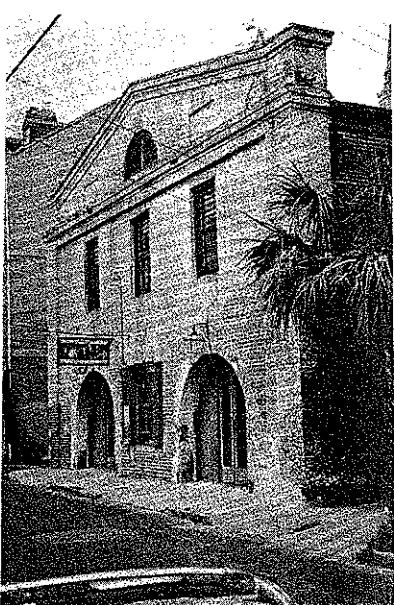

The English author and critic of taste, Osbert Lancaster, has written a devastating satire on the cult of preservation in its most virulent form as practices in a hypothetical English town under the title of "There'll Always be a Drayfete" in which the activities of Miss Dracula Parsley-Fidget, her family and friends are depicted. This book should be required reading for all of us interested in preservation to enable us to retain not only a sense of humor but of proportion and of values of the relative importance of those things most deserving of survival in a rapidly changing world.

28 Elliott
Built early 18th century,
restored 1941

71 Anson
Built 1805, restored 1959

20 Queen, Footlight Player
Workshop. Restored 1941