This History

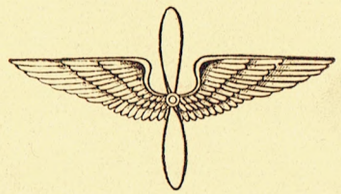

of the

SIXTH DETACHMENT, A. S. A. P.

UNITED STATES ARMY

has a twofold purpose —to recall the bright and happy days that have been ours and to present to friends a more intimate understanding of our work during the World War

MAJOR WILLIAM BUTLER

District Manager of Finance Detroit District Bureau of Aircraft Production

Major and second-in-command 70th Battalion Canadian Expeditionary Forces. He saw active service on the Western Front in Belgium and France with the 24th Battalion, "Victoria Rifles of Canada" C. E. F. Continuous service with U. S. Government (Signal Corps and Bureau of Aircraft Production) since July, 1917. "He is a man who is at once—an energetic administrator—enthusiastic student—and best of friends."

History of the

SIXTH DETACHMENT

U. S. A.

AS unwelcome as kitchen police is the detail of writing the history of the Sixth Detroit Detachment, Air Service, Aircraft Production. It involves so little of what the public regards as war that the chronicle unavoidably assumes the aspect of a class history rather than the record of a military unit during the Great War. Skillfully to camouflage it with martial thrills enough to interest the casual reader would require the imaginative art of the author of the daily communiques of the German war office during the autumn "retirement." As for setting down a veracious account of the private adventures of the individual members—boy, page Elinor Glynn and the shades of De Maupassant and Balzac, also release no copy until the discharges come through and the "C. O." is divested of his censorship authority, and by the way, get quotations on heavy asbestos.

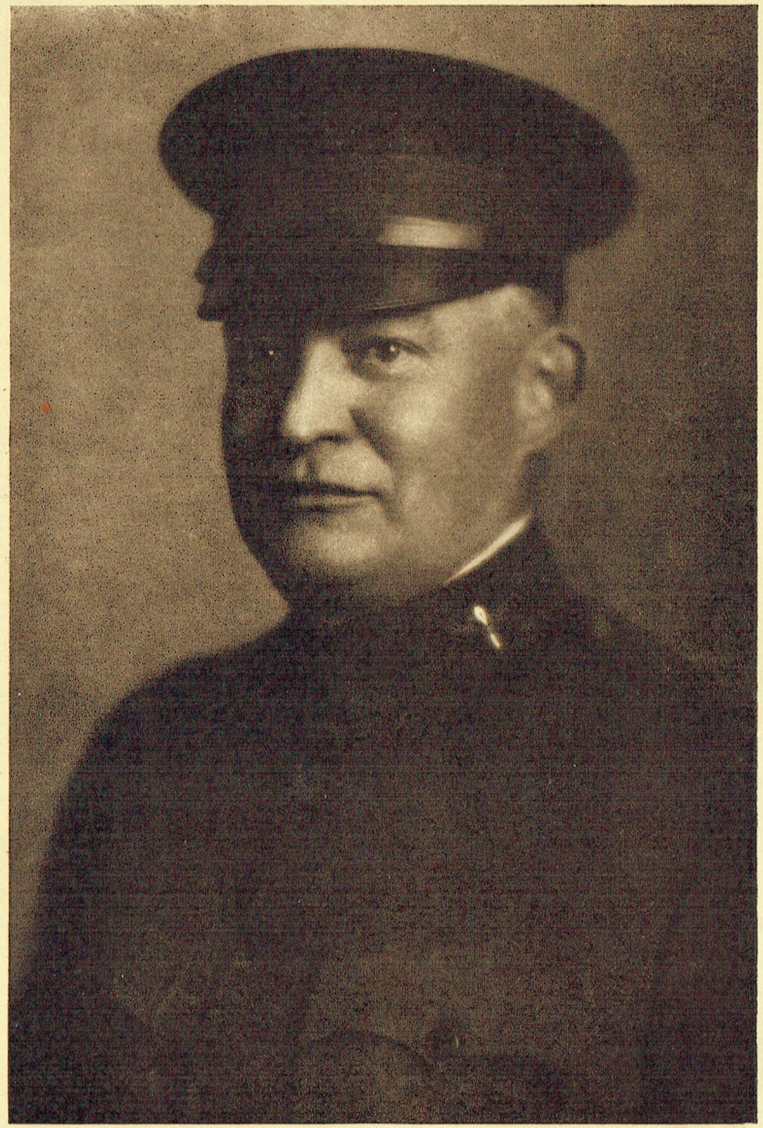

From its inception certain phases of the aircraft program were administered by the military. Under the selective service plan, whereby the government undertook to find for each man that place for which his civilian calling best fitted him, men began to be sifted from camp and cantonment and called from civilian life to assignments in the rapidly growing organization administering the production of aircraft in Detroit. From late in 1917 uniformed men have been a familiar sight in the motor and plane building shops of the city. For months, the detachment of enlisted men so serving were designated as the 816th Depot Aero Squadron and its affairs were handled from Chicago. The Hotel Charlevoix was selected as providing comfortable, well located quarters and the immediate command was vested in a succession of executive officers with varying success.

Although much for later reminiscence occurred prior to August 1, 1918, the history proper can only begin with that date when the aviation section of the Signal Corps was established as a distinct branch of the military organization and the former aero squadron was given the new designation, Sixth Detachment, Air Service, Aircraft Production.

The change in designation was followed by no immediate change in routine. We continued to fall in at 6:45 in the morning and fall out after two deep breaths; we put in the same hours at the plants, stood evening formation at the same time and spent the subsequent hour besieging the orderly room for the nightly "late pass." Rumors of commissions, warrants or any sort of promotion had become so stale that even the feeblest humorist of the Detachment no longer ventured to launch this decrepit joke.

The real history started late in August with the appearance of Lieutenant James F. White as commanding officer and Lieutenant Norman L. Kilcup as aide. In his first talk Lieutenant White informed us that he had been ordered to Detroit with instructions to put "the largest and most important detachment in the United States" on a "strictly military basis." He sketched briefly an outline of his program and consternation prevailed. Rumor followed rumor, according to army psychology, until Harry Kelley finally had us bivouacked on Grand Circus Park until the barracks were built out beyond the Seven Mile Road whence we would "hike" to work each Monday morning in heavy marching order with six days' field rations, drill evenings and guard the plants nights in addition to our work, our week ends being spent in thirty mile marches to Webb Lake and other points around Detroit.

But the fears of the apprehensive ones soon appeared baseless and with the inauguration of the new program, the Detachment experienced the only period of consistent and intelligent military discipline and participated in the only organized

JAMES GOODRICH HEASLET, Major A. S. A. P.

Major Heaslet resigned as Vice-President of the Studebaker Corporation to enter the service of the Government, September 1, 1917. He was commissioned a Captain in the Signal Corps, December 27, 1917, advanced to Major, April 30, 1918, discharged from service, February 1, 1919. Had charge of all Liberty Engine and Plane Production, Detroit District and general supervision over Inspection Department, Production Department, Industrial Relations Department, Plane Production Department, Engineering Department and General Office. "All recognized the pre-eminent qualifications enabling him to successfully direct the Detroit District. An efficient officer and a very fine gentleman."

activities it had known within more than a year. We drilled three nights a week after work, and had calisthenics every morning before breakfast, for which every man felt better. The men got behind a field and track meet, a public dance at the Arcadia, and a ball game with the "gobs" from the River Rouge training station, putting on energetic ticket selling campaigns that netted $3087.50 on the three events. Non-com school was held every Monday night, there was inspection every Saturday afternoon, and special artillery classes twice a week were inaugurated. A glee club was organized under the leadership of Sergeant Joe Kane.

Morale was further heightened by the arrival of warrants effective October 1, recognizing in some measure the high grade work done by the men for so many months as privates. Lieutenant White received his captaincy at the same time.

On October 4th, 1918, a detail of seventy-nine men arrived from Camp Grant, Rockford, Ill., and became a part of the detachment. The boys proved to be likable fellows, got into our activities with no little spirit and were soon as much a part of us as those who had been here for many months.

On October 21st, 1918, the detachment was saddened by the death of Private Paul Murphy of St. Paul, who contracted pneumonia early in the month and after a hard fight passed away early Monday morning. The entire detachment acted as guard of honor when the casket left for the station. "Murph" had become, in a few months, one of the best liked men among us, and his frank, generous nature and Irish wit made the loss one sincerely felt by every man.

The most successful get-together was the dinner given at the Fellowcraft Club, Thanksgiving Eve, attended by practically every man. Major Butler, Major Heaslet, the officer heads of departments and the officers of the detachment were guests. The feast, with plenty of turkey for a foundation, was a "peach."

The signing of the armistice had no noticeable effect on our routine. Fighting stopped at once but production continued. A change of command occurred December 1, when Captain White was made assistant to Major Heaslet and Lieutenant Kilcup our commanding officer. The oncoming of winter, the letting down of discipline elsewhere and in pursuance of orders as outlined by Washington for all detachments, the new "C. O." abandoned formations, room checks and drills. Since that date we have known little of the rigors of military life, save the occasional unlucky bird who reported late on furlough, and the work has suffered no apparent set-back.

The publication of this souvenir of our days together was decided upon at a dinner for the men given at the Board of Commerce January 9th, 1919. Since then the all-absorbing topic of conversation has been discharges, a few have already come through, and there seems to be very good prospects that a general release will occur shortly.

And so closes the chronicle of the Sixth Detachment. Our service was humdrum, our duties were prosaic. We are denied the glory due those who endured the actual fighting; and the inevitable regret that we have not that experience behind us will always be ours. The time of parting is near and as we go back to civil pursuits, and varying fortunes attend our future lives, the less pleasant aspects of our past year will gradually fade.

Insignificant then will seem the monotony of our tasks, the irksomeness of discipline, and the sting that comes from sincere service scantly recognized. Tenderer will be the memories of our life in common and its comradeship, more cherished the enduring friendships formed, plainer the realization of the honor of the uniform, let the service be what it may. Whatever the regret our service brings us in its lack of compensations due the fighting man, we can carry ever the menory of one year with as fine comrades and true friends as come to a man, when life was lived fully and we made the most of what came.

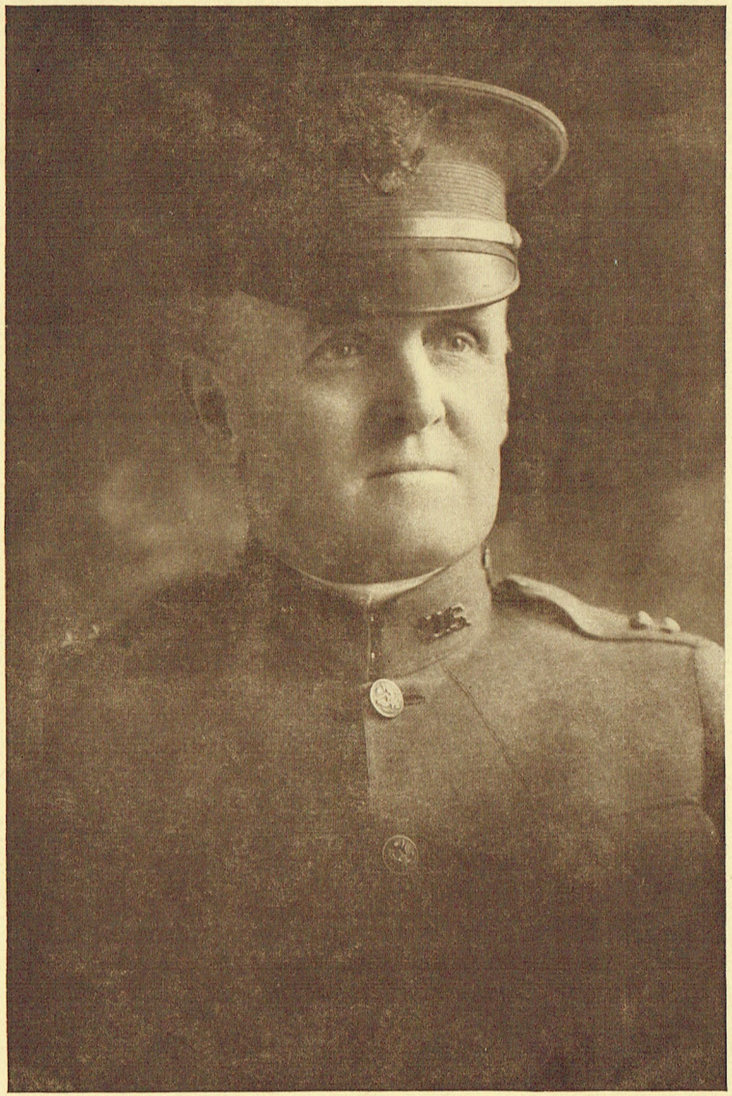

JAMES F. WHITE, Captain A. S. A. P.

Captain White served with Troop "C" N. G. N. Y., 1898 to 1905, Captain N. G. N. Y. April 1917, commissioned First Lieutenant Infantry at Plattsburg Officers' Training Camp November 27, 1917, and assigned 49th Infantry, United States Regulars, Camp Merritt, New Jersey. Transferred December 18, 1917, to Signal Corps, recommissioned same grade, same rank in Regular Army, temporary, and assigned as Personnel Officer, Accounts Section, Equipment Division. Retained such assignment until April 5, 1918, then transferred to New York as Personnel Officer, Finance Division, B. A. P., functioning as such until August 20, 1918, on which date reported at Detroit, Michigan, as Commanding Officer, Detachment No. 6, A. S. A. P. Promoted September 18, 1918, to Captain, A. S. A. P. Transferred December 1, 1918, same District, to Production Division and appointed Associate District Manager of Production, and upon discharge from service of Major James G. Heaslet, on February 1, 1919, appointed District Manager of Production. "Every inch a soldier, strict in discipline yet sympathetic with the men, he taught us how to be soldiers ourselves."

An Appreciation of the

CANTEEN SERVICE

OF all memories of our Detroit tour of duty, none will be brighter than those of the canteen and the splendid girls who served so loyally there. Without the glamour of driving motor cars for the officers, the thrill of ambulance work or the prominence gained by participation in the various "drives," canteen service called for long hours of arduous, unromantic work. "Waiting table" for droves of hungry doughboys and "gobs" who came in for "chow" and lots of it and were not overly particular as to how they consumed it, takes most of the romance out of "doing something for the boys." But there was a smile and a nod for every guest and a cheerfulness and sincerity about the service that sent each away enthusiastic for the place. In the annals of what women did in the war, no higher place should be accorded any than that given the canteen girl.

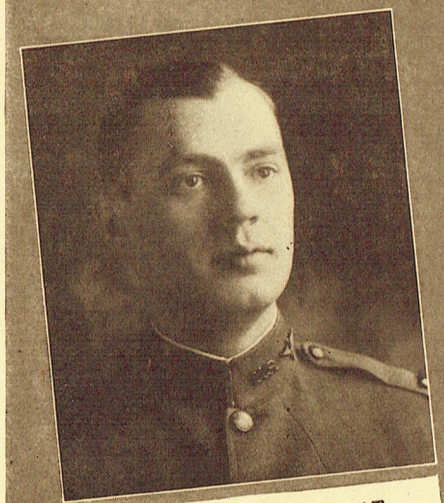

ROBERT R. FOX, Captain Medical Corps

Captain Fox enlisted January 12, 1918, at Detroit, Michigan, and has been senior medical officer in charge of the detachment ever since. "The 'Daddy' of the Detachment, he is soldierly and stern in bearing, but jovial and fatherly to the boys by preference. Justly noted for his dignity in presiding at a famous periodic military ceremony."

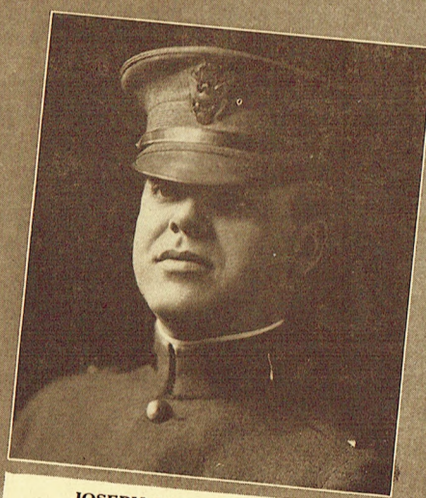

ESTEY C. YINGLING,
1st Lieutenant Medical Corps

Lieutenant Yingling enlisted July 15, 1918, at Columbus, Ohio. He was sent to Camp Greenleaf, Chickamauga Park, Ga., and reported to Detroit District October 1, 1918. "Conscientious in the discharge of his duties, considerate of the men and efficient in his work." The Lieutenant's home is in Lima, Ohio.

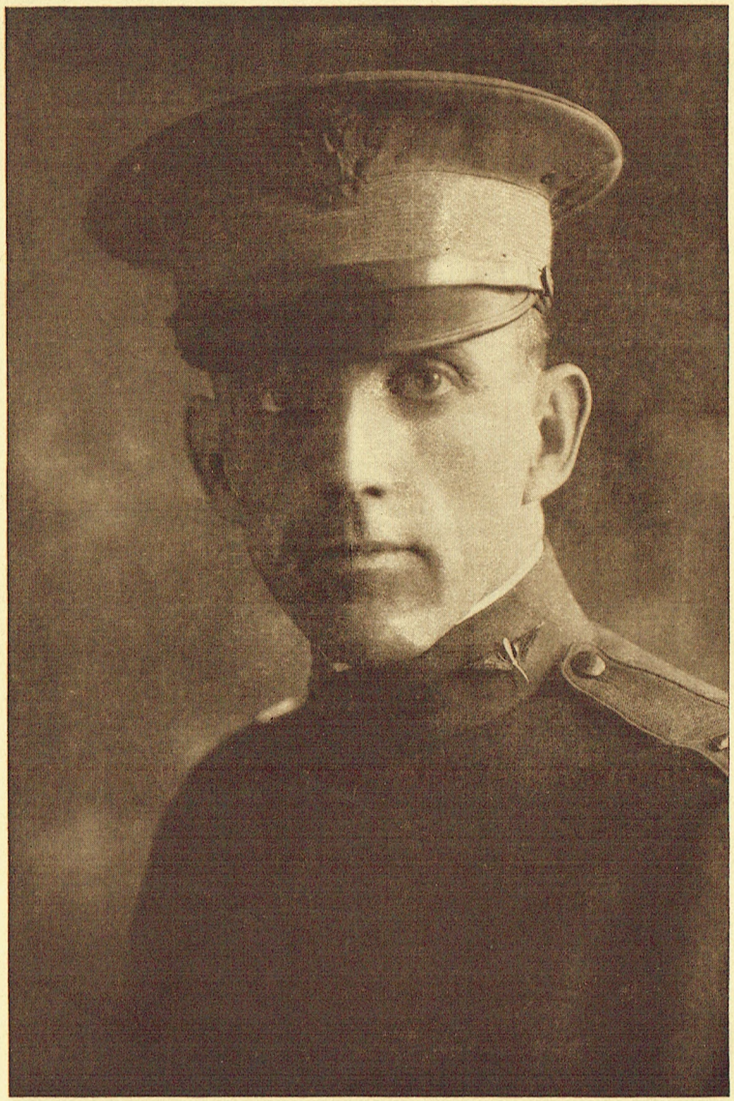

LEON STADLER WESTCOAT
2nd Lieutenant A. S. A. P.

Lieutenant Westcoat enlisted February 16, 1918, at Philadelphia, Pa., and was assigned to the Accounts Department, Detroit District. Commissioned at Detroit, October 11, 1918. "Exceptional in ability, steadfast in friendships, considerate as a chief. A dignified officer and a courteous gentleman." "Westy's" home address is 1714 Jefferson St., Philadelphia, Pa.

JOSEPH M. KAVANAUGH
2nd Lieutenant A. S. A. P.

Lieutenant Kavanaugh enlisted February 2, 1918, at Fort Slocum, N. Y., and was assigned to the Approvals Department, Detroit District Office. Commissioned October 29, 1918. "He was 'Kavvy' as a private and insists on being 'Kavvy' yet to his former comrades. A snappy officer, keen executive and all 'round good fellow." "Kavvy's" home address is 4025 Northminster St., Pittsburgh, Pa.

NORMAN L. KILCUP, 2nd Lieutenant A. S. A. P.

Lieutenant Kilcup has been the Commanding Officer of the Sixth Detachment since November 29, 1918. He enlisted September 20, 1917 as a Private First Class and was sent to Kelly Field, San Antonio, Texas, to Ground Officers' Training School. Commissioned as Second Lieutenant, Signal Reserve Corps. Served as Commanding Officer on Recruit Line, in Recruit Division, First Training Brigade, Kelly Field No. 1, Texas, until April, 1918. Attended School of Military Aeronautics, Georgia School of Technology, Atlanta, Georgia, until May, 1918, was ordered back to Kelly Field, Texas, serving there at Headquarters, Second Training Brigade, assigned as Commanding Officer of 13th Detachment and later as Assistant Adjutant the Organization Division Headquarters. On July 26, 1918, was transferred to Air Service, Aircraft Production and ordered to Washington, D. C.; August 14, 1918, ordered to Detroit, Michigan, and assigned to Detachment No. 6, A. S. A. P., for duty. "In thought, speech and action he is always with his men and has labored incessantly for their welfare. The well earned respect and affection in which he is held testifies to their appreciation and the success of his methods."

WILLIAM F. MERRILL, 2nd Lieutenant A. S. A. P.

Lieutenant Merrill entered the Second Officers Reserve Training Camp, Plattsburg Barracks, Plattsburg, N. Y., August 25th, 1917, and was assigned to the 1st Battery 17th Provisional Training Regiment. Commissioned 2nd Lieutenant Air Service Signal Reserve Corps, November 8th, 1917. Transferred to Washington, D. C., January 6, 1918. Transferred February 20, 1918, to Breese Aircraft Corporation, Farmingdale, L. I. Transferred June 10, 1918, to Detroit District as Supply Officer. "A capable, hard working officer who faithfully discharged the duties assigned him. His task of clothing the men with something beside 'red tape' kept him busy but he successfully accomplished it."

The

SIXTH DETACHMENT

By EDGAR A. GUEST

We weren't in the papers so much,
We didn't reap much of the fame,
When they're writing the story of all of the glory
Perhaps they won't mention our name.
But there wasn't a job we neglected
And taking the past in review,
I reckon today, we can stand up and say
We did what they gave us to do.

We didn't sniff powder in battle,
We didn't get into the gas,
We weren't at the front, in the heat and the brunt,
Just daring the Boches to pass.
But now that the fighting is over,
And the planning and working are through,
We can make this our boast, that we stuck to the post
And did what they gave us to do.

We didn't get fed on excitement,
We never got sight of a ship,
Though we hungered for France, they denied us the chance.
And none of us packed up a grip.
But we stuck to our duty like soldiers
And never a one was untrue,
We missed all the fun of the war with the Hun
But we did what they gave us to do.

The Task and Its Accomplishment

BURR-RRR-RRR-RRR! Remember how we used to rush out into the streets when we heard this noise, gaze into the clouds waiting for the aeroplane that was to fly over the city to appear in sight? It was not so long ago that we were all Rubes—how it used to frighten us to feel that the daring aviator was liable to fall at any minute, and being human we wanted to be there when he cashed in.

But today, how blasé this all seems. The Burr-rrr-rrr-rrr of the motor is as familiar to our ears as "Over There" played by a military band on parade. We merely gaze up to ascertain the height at which the ship is flying, and continue to tread the straight and narrow path. Of course the pilot still remains the conquering hero, but how many of us have ever given a thought to the motor that is thundering away, and the work of the men who watched this steel and aluminum thing from the time it was a mere ingot through all of its stages until the time it was placed upon the block for its 50 hour test before being passed as fit to go into a plane?

Having passed its 50 hour block test the motor is ready to be placed in a plane

This was the work the men of the Sixth Detachment, A.S.A.P., had to perform. Each man had been carefully selected for ability along certain lines, some as accountants, auditing each voucher before the contractor could receive payment for his materials, labor and factory expenses. Others were production experts, constantly watching the output of the various machines, facilitating the handling of raw materials, and seeing that motors and planes were completed in record time.

Still others were machinists and tool makers, working in the factories as lathe operators, or making the tools that were so necessary in order to carry on the extensive program of aircraft construction that was called for.

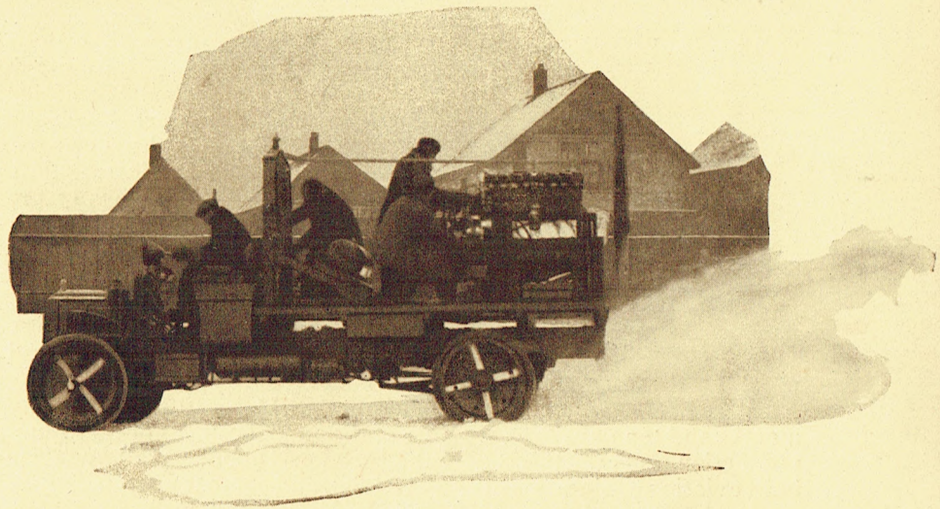

American industry's flexibility and adaptability and its tendency to standardization in almost every line of production had often been demonstrated in peace-time business, but it is certain that the aircraft program was one of the greatest tests ever made as a direct result of the war.

During the nine years preceding the war 118 aeroplanes had been built and delivered to the Signal Corps of the Army by nine aeroplane manufacturers. Many of these ships had been smashed or were virtually obsolete. In 1916, 366 aeroplanes, ordered for the Army, were to be built by 16 different manufacturers; they were to be of 10 distinct types and 32 different designs. Sixty-four had been received when air control became an established factor in the war.

Thus while European armies were scouting, training guns and harassing troops with fairly successful aerial squadrons, America was seeing red and threatening dire consequences to an efficient and well equipped enemy with 118 aeroplanes, some of which were existent only by virtue of property accounts. European countries knew how long it had taken them to develop air fleets with their individual idea of production and naturally looked askance at America's ability to make any sort of showing in the air if it went into the war.

In May, 1917, Colonel Deeds called to Washington Mr. J. G. Vincent, vice-president and chief engineer of the Packard Motor Car Company, Detroit, Michigan, and Mr. E. J. Hall, of the Hall-Scott Motor Company of Berkeley, California. Mr. Vincent had developed a 200-horsepower aviation motor for the Packard Company. It was designed for durability and safety and had a weight of four pounds per horsepower. This motor had been mounted on a five-ton truck without engine or transmission; a four blade propeller was attached to the motor and, with wheels locked, the truck was skidded around at 30 miles an hour. Mr. Hall had been developing aviation engines for aeroplanes sold to foreign governments, chiefly in the Orient.

Messrs. Hall and Vincent went to work on a motor that would combine all of the best features of the Packard, Cadillac, Roll-Royce, Hall-Scott and German Mercedes, thus taking elements from both aviation and automobile engines. As fast as layout drawings were ready they were rushed to the Packard Motor Car Company's plant in Detroit, where detailed drawings were made.

On June 1st, 1917, the Aircraft Production Board and the Navy

Technical Board recommended a production of 22,600 aeroplanes for training and combat service.

On July 4th, 1917, less than six weeks after the design was begun—an eight cylinder Liberty motor was completed and delivered to the Bureau of Standards at Washington. It functioned successfully and was the basis of the Liberty 12-cylinder motor of 330-horsepower, approximately two pounds per horsepower, which latter motor was built, given the 50 hour test and passed August 25th, 1917. In the whole history of motor design from the two cycle, single cylinder, candle-ignition motor up to the present time this accomplishment has no equal.

Then reports from abroad conveyed the startling information that all engines then in use were due to become obsolete because of horsepower limitations. Air fighters were becoming more expert all the time and what they needed to change the balance of combat supremacy was power! The ships must fly faster! The original motor developing 330 horsepower was increased in dimensions to produce 375 horsepower. This was increased again to 400, and finally one of 440 horsepower was produced, which was the standard Liberty at the time of the signing of the armistice.

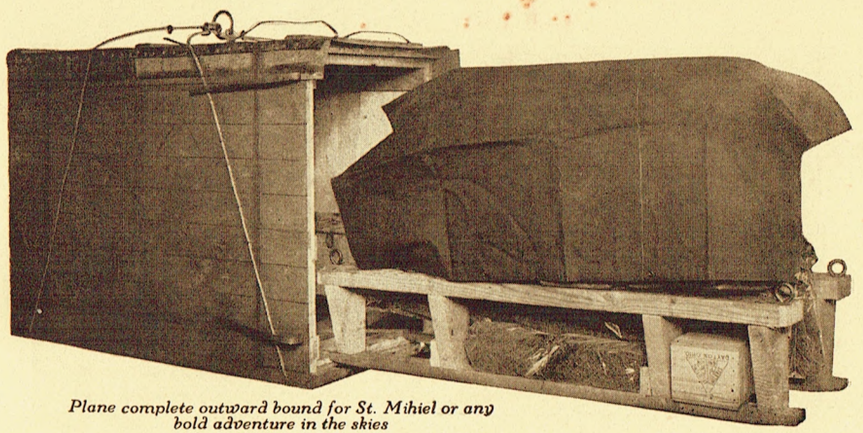

More power with less weight is the requisite in war

At the cessation of hostilities, November 11th, 1918, one year five months and ten days from the date of the announcement of the aircraft production program, this country had produced about 32,420 American-built aviation engines, and 12,285 training and combat planes.

In detail, aeroplane production and delivery were as follows: training machines delivered to field and depot, 8,170; navy, 140; total, 8,310; combat aeroplanes delivered overseas, 3,103; field and depot, 717; navy, 155; total, 3,975; grand total, 12,285.

In detail, motor production and delivery were as follows: training motors for aeroplane plants, 9,069; overseas, 325; navy, 515; Allies, 1; training fields, 6,376; total, 16,286; combat engines delivered to aeroplane plants, 5,327; overseas, 5,030; navy, 3,746; Allies, 1,090; training fields, 941; total 16,134; grand total, 32,420.

These figures refer to the construction of seven different types of engines. Those for primary training, were being manufactured by the Curtis Company of Buffalo, New York, the Hall-Scott Company, Berkeley, Cal., and the Nordyke-Marmon Company, Indianapolis, Ind., and were the Hall-Scott 100-horsepower motor.

Plane complete outward bound for St. Mihiel or any bold adventure in the skies

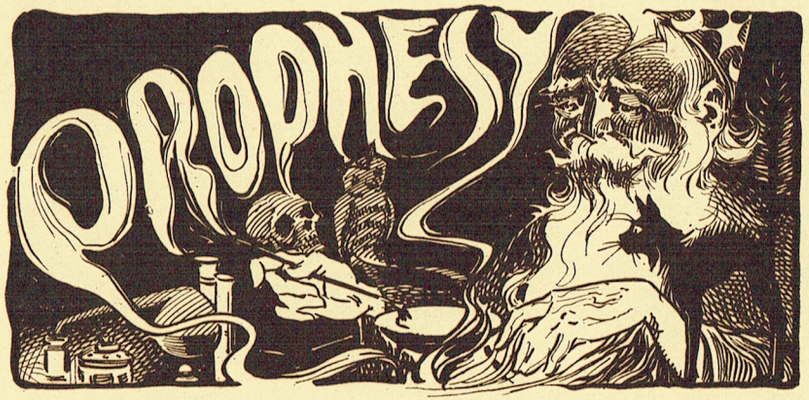

The responsibility of building the 100-horsepower Gnome engine for advanced training was given to the General Vehicle Company, LeRhone engine contracts went to the Union Switch & Signal Company, Hispano-Suiza 150-horsepower motors to the Wright-Martin Aircraft Corporation.

Contracts for combat engines, Liberty type, were given the following concerns: the Packard Motor Car Company, Lincoln Motors Company, Ford Motor Car Company, General Motors Corporation, Nordyke-Marmon Company, and the Trego Motors Company.

It is certain that had the war continued the production of motors would have reached 8,000 per month by January 1st, 1919, and to 10,000 in the Spring.

In the Detroit District, Bureau of Aircraft Production, about 15,572 Liberty aviation motors had been built and delivered into the service, and in the plant of the Fisher Body Corporation 400 training planes and 1,529 combat airplanes of the De Haviland "4" type, also 3 baby Caproni 4-passenger planes. This type of Caproni required three Liberty motors, two of them as tractors and one as a pusher. In addition to its four passengers it carried 1,782 lbs. of bombing equipment. It had a wing spread of 78 feet and a speed of approximately 110 miles per hour. The LePere plane—America's fastest two seater fighting aircraft—was designed and built in the factory of the Packard Motor Car Company, under the guidance of the French Aviation Mission to America. The LePere was created around the Liberty motor, with the special object of getting the full benefit of the great engine's superior design. Two LePere planes were on the sea en route for France; two others were flying in this country, and twenty-five more were receiving their finishing touches in the Packard shops when the armistice was signed.

These figures give some idea of the work the men of the Sixth Detachment were doing, and being away from the din and glamor of battle, they are denied the usual popular favor, but it should be remembered that the success of the "Boys Over There" depended a great bit on the less spectacular though no less important work of "The Boys Over Here."

MY travels had taken me to many parts of the world, and time after time the thoughts and memories of the good old days in the army were brought to my mind as I visited with various members of the Sixth Detachment, many of whom I had not seen for some years. So when I arrived in Lawrence, Mass., I betook myself to the home of Lieut. Norman Kilcup, our old C. O., now Governor of the State, in order to get in touch with some of the things the boys were doing. After meeting Mrs. Kilcup we retired to the spacious sitting room and made ourselves comfortable before the fireplace.

"It has been particularly gratifying to many members of our detachment whom I have seen recently, to know that the affairs of this great state are in your hands," was the way in which I expressed the oft heard opinion of many of the fellows.

Accepting the statement very modestly, the "Lieut." replied: "I have considered it a most acceptable duty to do what I can for the State of Massachusetts, but I regret that I am unable to keep in more direct touch with the men. I have anticipated your visit in order to learn of many of the fellows, whom you wrote you had seen, for my intimate connections are principally in and around Lawrence. However, I hear from the boys quite often, and have seen some of them." For the next few hours I was mute with interest as I heard the "Lieut." tell of the many fellows.

"I don't know where to begin," he said, "but our old Detachment is certainly well represented among the prominent and successful men of the country. The other day I met 'Squirrel' Lapsley, who resigned his commission shortly after the armistice was declared and went with the Ringling Bros. Circus acting in the capacity of an entertainer, but the lure of army life was too great upon him and he has re-enlisted in the army and is now a Corporal.

"While in New York City last week I attended a performance at the Metropolitan Opera House and greatly enjoyed hearing G. Harvey Porters' lyric tenor voice. He was starring in his own production 'Bite Em Off.'

"Donny Patterson has been particularly successful, and has gained national fame as a member of Congress on account of his great fight for prohibition.

"Of course you remember Tim Sullivan. Well, Tim is now the owner of one of our largest sugar plantations, having had quite a bit of experience while in the army in handling cane. (Kahin).

"Ralph Levinson and Henry Greenberger have resumed their law practice, and for several years have been actively engaged in attempting to find out what the 'Silver Star' that Clement wore on his sleeve meant.

"A number of other fellows are located around here, some of whom have done very well; but for some reason I don't seem to be able to keep in very close touch with them. But what are the fellows doing whom you have seen recently?"

"Well, I just left Detroit, where I spent the day with Lloyd Grinnell. Lloyd is now sole owner of the Cable Co. Walter Guibord is still in Detroit fulfilling his social engagements he made during the war.

"'Lanky' Kelly and 'Mike' Donovan are partners in the Detroit Improvement & Sales Co., and have put over several large deals. The most notable one being the sale of the Peninsular State Bank to H. M. Kellogg, Manager of The Charlevoix Hotel, to hold his profits for 1918.

"For the past six months I have been working eastward from Japan. While in Tokio I met 'Clif' Carter, who was making a time study in a tea tasting factory.

"In Honolulu I accidentally met Charlie Reinhardt, who was taking lessons on the ukulele. Charlie's ambition is to become the soloist in Sousa's Band on his return to the States.

"One of the most pleasant stops was made at Santa Catalina Island. Dick Hart made his fortune posing for Harrison Fischer and then retired. He now has a magnificent home and a wonderful family on the island. He is the same old 'Dick,' loving the out of doors and spending a great deal of time sleeping.

"In California I met Francis X. Grimmer, who has taken Francis X. Bushman's place in the movies.

"From Frisco I traveled east with Ernie Koch, who is now the president of the Santa Fe Railroad. We stopped at Grinnell, Kansas, long enough to see John Borah, who owns the controlling interest in the Borah National Bank.

"In Chicago we met Merrill Kane. 'Mel,' as you know, is owner of the Chicago Cubs. He gave us 'comps' for a game and our seats were in the 'bleachers.' We met 'Red' Maynard at the game, and had to listen to him tell all about the three fine boys he has at home. Each of them will be president some day, 'Red' claims.

"And to think of 'Walt' Moran being our Ambassador to France. 'Walt' has certainly made good, as we all knew he would, and never has such cordial relations existed between the two countries. You can even notice the difference in French fried potatoes.

"Before running down to my home in Richmond, Va., I stopped over in Philadelphia and the first person I met was 'Ed' Du Bois. 'Ed' invited me to visit him at one of his numerous clubs, and insisted that I spend the afternoon golfing with him. He is still single and enjoys the society life as much as ever. He really seems to be the 'social lion' in spite of his age.

"I made plans to see a number of others but in many cases I missed them because of my short stops in most places. However, it was my good fortune to meet Stirling Silliphant while waiting for train connections in Washington. 'Sil' was on his way to Oklahoma to make his fortune in oil, and then intended to take up 'evangelistic work' along the lines of Billie Sunday."

"If you will not be disturbed by the rest of the family we shall be glad to have you dine with us," was the cordial greeting of Mrs. Kilcup as she came into the room. We accepted most willingly, still continuing our discussion of the Sixth Detachment men, for each of the family seemed to cherish a personal concern in these things.

"I received a letter from 'Lieut.' Merrill dated at New Orleans, telling me what wonderful success he is having with his string of horses," my host stated. "You have heard that he purchased the entire stables of Foxhall Keene, Billings and other great owners, and incidentally Dandeno is his favorite jockey.

" 'Art' Williams, you know, is Quartermaster General of the Army. Harry Kelly is starring in a production along the lines of 'Pollyana,' and his 'smile' has made him the most famous actor on Broadway.

"Joe Kane is now making records for the Victor Co., and it is said that his royalties are much greater than those received by Caruso and Martinelli. 'Em' Berry stayed in Michigan and is now base ball coach for the U. of M.

" 'Ed' Cressell is owner of the Baldwin Locomotive Works and there can be no question but that our improved railroad service is due a great deal to his efforts."

"Do you remember Byrne Hueber?" I interrupted the 'Lieut.' to ask. "Bryne is now the Dean of Syracuse University and has succeeded in placing Yale and Harvard in second and third places among the institutions of learning.

"Morris Hoenig you know is today considered a greater trust organizer than J. Ogden Armour in his palmiest days.

"Frank Stack, our Secretary of War, has certainly made good in his job, the only trouble being the League of Nations has done away with all war.

" 'Hoke' Lee, the Socialist leader in Congress, is making a great fight for the right of each man to have his own 'still.'

"By the way, I met Lieutenant 'Ed' Quinnius, (affectionately known as 'The Kernel'). He is the head of the legal branch of the Ford Motor Car Company now. He is entirely cured of 'flat feet' as there are no apartment houses in the Parishes of Louisiana. Lieutenant 'Milt' Evans was with his old friend 'Ed' and told me that he had purchased the 'Three Y' ranch. He is happily married and is the father of 11 fine girls and 16 red headed boys."

It seemed as though we had started on a topic of never ending interest and it was well nigh midnight when I reluctantly departed from their welcome fireside. I was half way down the block when I heard a familiar voice call to me, "Just one thing more, don't forget to come and see us soon again."

CAN YOU IMAGINE?

Captain James F. White refusing to make a speech?

Lieut. Kilcup not saying, "Just one thing more"?

Lieut. Merrill omitting, "About Face"?

Tim Sullivan singing Rule Brittania?
