Our fellow students.

This year marks the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Pocomoke High School Papoose. Therefore, we, the yearbook staff of 1969, wish to dedicate Volume XXV to the scores of students, teachers, administrators, and staff members who stood before us in the past, as well as to those who stand before us today. The tribute is insignificant in comparison to their efforts; the efforts which have made our alma mater a fine builder of mind, body, and spirit. The Papoose has unfolded for a quarter of a century a drama of development and growth, work and satisfaction... and an enduring sense of pride. By so dedicating this yearbook, we hope to bring to mind traditions of the past in order to enrich the promise of the future.

POCOMOKE HIGH SCHOOL, WE SALUTE YOU!

Our hardworking teachers.

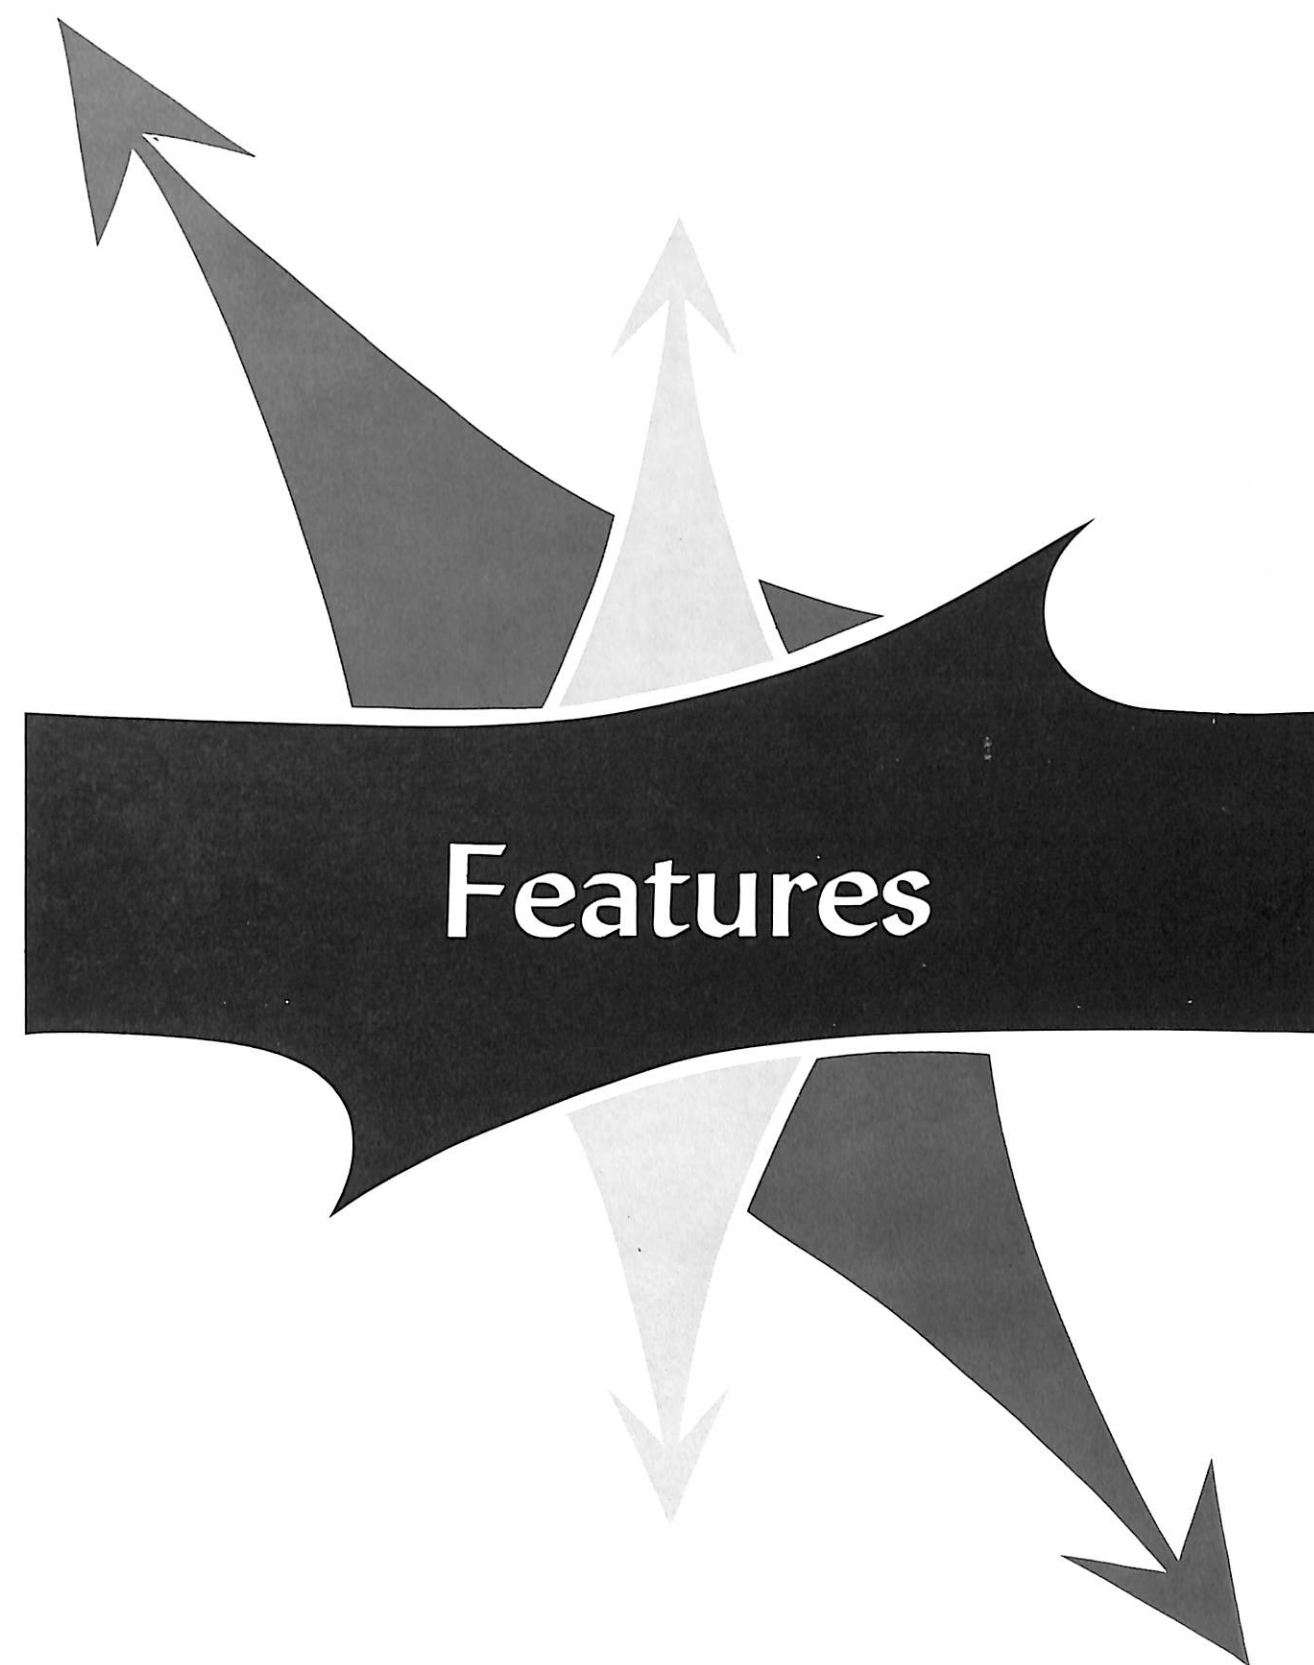

We Dedicate The 25th Papoose
To You,
Our School

Our overloaded administrators.

Mr. Martin, looking for his children?

"The Whole Truth"

Fun. Long, hard, exhausting work to bring brief enjoyment. A short, funny farce telling the story of Mr. Martin's business worries, his children's masquerade and love complications, looney relatives, and strange visitors. The final climax—applause. Fun.

They practiced walking . . .

. . . for a walk in space.

A contrast—dreams of the future.

Valerie Bryson,
Susan Marshall.

Prom Blasts Off On Space Trek

Odessey. A starlit sky leads the way. A rocketship zooms off into a romantic dreamland. Soft clouds of silk and satin. An orchid-scented array of soft colors; exquisite sights. An explosion of music soars above the low murmur of voices. A king and queen reign for the journey. All in one brief night. Odessey.

Mr. & Miss PHS: Jack Tatem and Jean Boston.

This is a space walk?

The Sentries are way out.

The servers are out of this world according to Wayne Powell.

Eddie Rock and Lorraine Vickerman lead the Grand March.

Journey Leaves Lasting Imprint

Memories. A silent gym. Torn decorations. Scattered balls of tinfoil. Broken balloons. A stained tablecloth carelessly thrown on a bare table. The echo of notes drifts through the lonesome air. The stale smell of food, flowers and perfume. A beautiful creation now in ruins; but not lost. Memories.

Playing.

Moving. Never still. Always going somewhere: lunch, class, activities. The restless mass that brings life to a school learning, playing, thinking. An ever changing current. Moving.

Consuming.

Thinking.

Struggling.

Council Serges Forward

Election and campaign highlight SC year.

Candidates don't appear nervous.

Activity. The hum of excited chatter before a meeting. The repeated bang of a gavel. A call to order. The representatives of our school act as our mouth-pieces. Each and every member of the student council has a job to do; an opinion to uphold; an idea to bring forth; a school to govern. The Student Council is the heart of school spirit and discipline; making rules, decisions and money. We can truly say this year's Student Council has been the embodiment of — Activity.

Officers Voice Class Opinions

Gratitude. All during the year, class officers work. Usually their work goes unappreciated. Class members think of them only with complaint. Here are those pillars of responsibility, the class officers, fresh — through juniors. For your unfailing devotion we give you our — gratitude.

Service. The Key Club started the year with an assembly on Viet Nam. Their other project was selling stadium seats to the student body. During the Key Club's meetings they have enjoyed hearing several good speakers and have an exchange with the Kiwanis. Key Club: Service.

Champions. The FBLA participated in the regional contest and returned with nine winners. On the practical side their projects include selling drinks during the games and pens to the student body. The result of these projects, is an education for a child in Tiawaine. Practical experience plus excellence in competition breathes future leaders of tomorrow. Champions.

Heartbeat. An enjoyable challenge. The excitement of a reporter; the seriousness of a journalist; the creativity of a writer. Cutting stencils, mimeographing, collecting news and information, keeping records, presenting a story with art. A headline stirs the imagination. A paragraph tells the facts. A newspaper captures the spirit, activity and life of the school — its Heartbeat.

Yearbook—Work And Play (Some Kids Work, Some Play)

Yearbook staff pockets prize money.

Staff wins posture award.

Hi there!

Imagination. Making a dull club or ordinary event alive in the retelling. Using pictures and words to capture a whole year. Transforming teachers from droning, impersonal robots into alive, vital people. Developing the mood of a moment to portray a year of life and all one a page which must instill a feeling of belonging in the reader. A yearbook is an explosion of hard work, fun, creativity, laughter, stories, deadlines, drudgery, frustration and imagination.

Smiles of victory.

Agility — a spark of advice from Coach Detwiler, a flash of speed, the burning desire of those who compete to win, the snapping quickness of agility. The relentless stamina that makes winners and then that little bit more that makes a champion. Eleven victories and a district championship. The highest honors attainable and all built on the tools of their trade: speed; stamina; agility.

A Pinch of Victory; A Touch of Defeat

Ballet?

Games are won on rebounds; Jack Tatem brings in another.

A Significant Milestone is Reached This Season

Agony. Weeks of strenuous conditioning. Aches, sprains, charley-horses. The sweat and hard work of a practice. The anxiety of a coach who can't play the game himself. The suffering through those final minutes. The hope and suspense of the fans, silently waiting . . . and then victory or defeat. Agony.

Tatem tops team with thousand points.

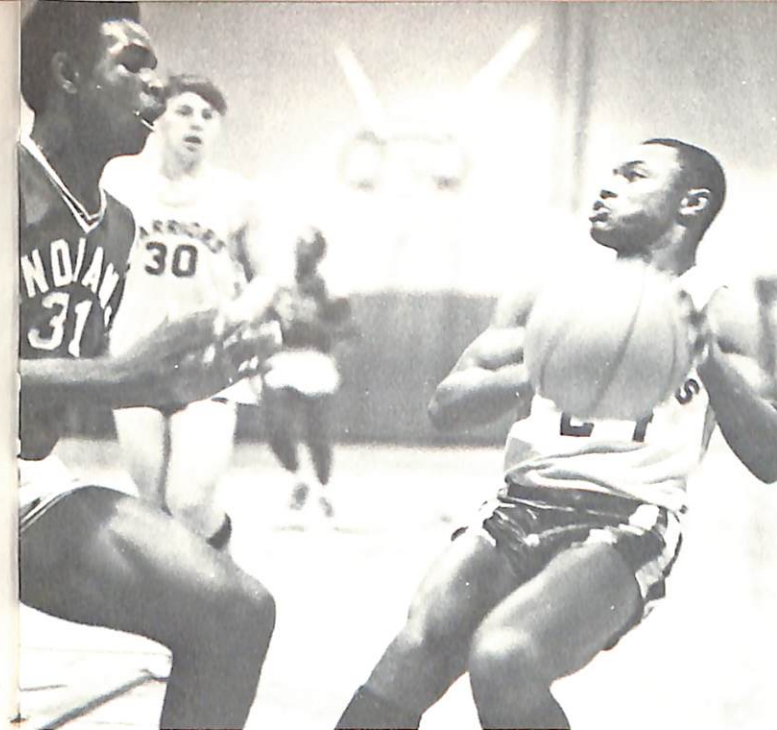

Time out: time in for pleading, inspiration and strategy from Coach Detwiler.

Basketball Season—Highs And Lows

P.H.S.'s Fulton Teagle: up, up and away.

David Byrd turns corner and heads for basket.

"You can't have it . . . Oh, yes I can . . . Oh, no you can't . . ."

Brian makes it look so easy.

A Step In The Right Direction

Eternity. Practice, practice and more practice. Running — dirty, rough and tiresome. Hours and hours of hard work become an eternity. Five minutes before the game — an eternity. A body poised in the air slowly shoots — an eternity. The play, the practice, working towards a spot on the varsity. How far away is that? Eternity.

Hands are glued to ball; a guard against clutching hands.

Wings seem to sprout on players as ball pops out of reach.

Success. Hours of practice bring perfect understanding to fellow team members. Communication is established between player and team; coach and team; fans and team. Practice clears the air of interference and with reception perfect, the players spirits soar as ball and basket connect and victory follows victory. The pride of accomplishment stirs in each girl as her team reaches the ultimate goal: a county championship and a perfect season. Success.

Target. A little metal cup on a rolling green hill. The journey is not as peaceful as it seems. A scenic group of trees may seem to offer shelter, but within lies costly entanglement. An innocent oval of pure sand lies with arms open, waiting to engulf an unsuspecting prey. A deep blue stretch of water breathes of lavishing coolness, not wishing to reveal her secret power of drowning those who venture near. Foresight is an indispensable tool the golf team uses to reach their — target.

CLASS SONG – "Tonight, Tonight"

Tonight, tonight, won't be just any night.
 Tonight there'll be some sorrowful tears.
 Tonight, tonight, we'll see our star tonight.
 And for us stars will shine from afar.
 Today the hours seem like minutes,
 The minutes go so quickly
 And day turns into night.
 O moon, grow bright,
 And make this mortal life endless light.
 Tonight!

The years, the years have passed so fast for us.
 They speed so swiftly by, day by day.
 The years, the years, remember them we must,
 Profit by the way we lived those golden days.
 To live, ourselves to life to give,
 To fight for what is right,
 Help all to see the light.
 So soon, we'll be completely free.
 Tonight, tonight.

World Revolves Around Seniors

Shawn Emory — Valedictorian and Old Home Prize

Tears. Events of a lifetime; long, yet all too brief, pass in review. A silent, relentless voice whispers, "What might I have done." One explosion of life; one chance to succeed is ebbing; another just bursting forth. Yes, on this night of nights you are dying and being born in the same moment. Old ideas are dead and new opportunities take their place. Is that rejoicing that I see or regret? Tears.

"Tonight, Tonight"

Triumph. A diploma. A passport to freedom — and responsibility. One day looked forward to for twelve years. A dream; a dream of glamour, gladness and growing up. A hope; a hope of pride, satisfaction and liberty. Finally it comes. A voice loudly echoes the Alma Mater. A hand gratefully receives a diploma. A heart joyfully rejoices in its newfound maturity. The jokes and laughter of childhood replaced by the decisions and ideals of adulthood. The word is waiting. Doors are opening. Minds are expanding. Characters are forming. The day has arrived to cast off the shackles of infancy and join the ranks of men. Triumph.

"The years, the years, remember them we must."

"Tonight there'll be some sorrowful tears."

"Tonight, tonight, we'll see our star tonight."

We know you like them skinny, but . . .
