

ELAND, FRIDAY EV

alone—after having directed his “orderly” to come to his room at a certain next morning, at which hour he was found cold and lifeless. Col. Wainwright was a polished and elegant gentleman, highly esteemed as an officer and for his private worth and good qualities, and his death cast a gloom over a large circle of warm friends who mourned the loss of so good a man—another victim of that dreadful theory that has robbed society of many an ornament.

The next victim of self-destruction was

1867_02_22_Wainwright_suicide_last_day_better_copy_pt_2