

Brightest and Best.

[Washington Star.]

In the death of Bishop Phillips Brooks religious America has lost one of its brightest and best. Deeply learned, his vast erudition never interfered with his popularity, nor did the encomiums of countless admirers diminish his untiring devotion to works of piety and benevolence. He added brilliancy to the episcopacy, and owed none of his success to artificial environments.

1893 01 25 Phillips Brooks obit

Clipped By:
boblesk
Feb 22, 2025