When you were showing the cart last night it reminded me that my mother saw it when Celine Blais presented it to us at the East State St. event and she is familiar with the business. I don't remember the spelling of it – Brassaw's? Anyway, my mother lived nearby at the time and she says the business was located in the building that is now the Royal Orchid. She was born in 1933 and remembers it when she was quite small, so it must have been there sometime before 1940. Her father/my grandfather Nelson Paxman worked there for a while. He was a carpenter, and she remembers they made various things out of wood. She particularly remembered them making wooden beads. She said Mr. and Mrs. B lived above the store.

Wanted to send the info before I forgot to!
