

QUIET HOME WEDDING.

Two of Montpelier's Popular Young People Made One.

A quiet but pretty home wedding occurred this morning at nine o'clock when Edwin S. Meigs and Miss Julia Margaret Allard were married at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Telesphor Allard, parents of the bride, at 39 Court street. The rooms were tastily decorated and the pair stood beneath an arch of smilax and pinks, and a floral horse shoe. Rev. Father W. J. O'Sullivan performed the ceremony, the father gave the bride away and F. B. Martell acted as best man. The couple were married in the presence of about thirty immediate friends and relatives. The presents were many and valuable.

Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served. The groom is a popular pharmacist employed in the W. E. Poole pharmacy while the bride is also a popular saleslady at the store of L. P. and H. C. Gleason, both being among Montpelier's most highly esteemed young people.

The couple left this afternoon for a few days visit in Boston and will reside with Mr. and Mrs. Allard upon their return.

To escape their friends who were waiting to shower them with rice, Mr. and Mrs. Meigs slipped away from their guests about one o'clock and, taking a hack, awaited the Montpelier and Wells River train at the "know-nothing" crossing near the creamery. But the "villain still pursued her" and their friends boarded the Central Vermont train and arrived early enough before their departure to deluge the pair with rice.
