“Tch Dien”

1899-1900

Ebell and Its Work

WHILE the name "Ebell" is identified with women and their work, it was originally adopted to honor the memory of of a man, Dr. Ebell. He was a scholar and traveler and conceived the idea of establishing an international academy of science, art, music and languages for women, with chapters all over the world. The first chapter was formed in Oakland, in 1876, and in October, 1894, The Ebell of Los Angeles was called into being by a small company of women assembled for the purpose. The Society was organized with sixty four charter members, the constitution being modeled after the Oakland Ebell.

Mrs. H. W. R. Strong was elected the first president, and Ebell claimed her able leadership for three years. The society being thus favorably and wisely organized, it was firmly established in a permanent home by its second president, Mrs. Clara B. Baker (now Mrs. Robert J. Burdette), who erected in 1897 the artistic and comfortable quarters we now occupy. In this year the Society was incorporated.

Ebell of Los Angeles has for its motto, Ich dien, which is suggestive of its highest conceptions and aims. Service is the badge of true humanity, and many are the women who wear it.

Ebell would lead them to spell out unselfish and loving service intelligently, and thus increase by hundredfold their usefulness in home and society.

Whether this aim is carried out feebly or inspiringly depends upon each member individually, as she identifies herself with the spirit I serve or serve me.

Nominally, while one society, Ebell is composed of sections, each a society in itself, given up to a distinct line of work ; and it is easy to see that the forceful life of Ebell largely depends upon the vigor of the sections.

This year's out line of work should be an incentive to Ebell members, to have the year fulfill the precedents of former years, and be "better than the last."

Current History Lectures

BY MRS. LOU V. CHAPIN

FIRST AND THIRD THURSDAYS. 3 P. M.

See Calendar

This work will embrace broad and impartial study of the following subjects :

WORLD POLITICS

Including constitutional changes in governing bodies and laws affecting national life and international relations.

COMMERCIAL DEVELOPMENT

The progress of trade in every land, with the opportunities offered Americans for success in the various fields of endeavor.

INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT

The advances made in methods of manufacture; the study of achievements in new fields of opportunity; the progress of foreign countries in industry and the practical arts.

SOCIAL DEVELOPMENT

This department of the work will be given special prominence, and a careful analysis will be made of municipal systems in all lands; and all experiments in the direction of public ownership will be carefully studied with a view to the comprehension of the benefits and defects of our own institutions, and how the one may be increased and the other eliminated. Trusts and trade combinations, charitable and reformatory organizations, cöoperative experiments. educational advances, and the many instrumentalities designed and operated for the improvement of social conditions will be considered, and free discussion of the great questions now before the public encouraged.

As all these topics will be followed in the order of their importance in the public mind, and their prominence in the leading reviews and newspapers, those who have much leisure for reading will be able to "read to the point," and for culture rather than amusement. Those who have little or no time for reading, by attendance upon this course will be enabled to keep abreast of the times, to be thoroughly "posted," and to gain clear and unbiased views of current history. No preliminary work will be required of any one, and the fullest discussion consonant with the aims of the work will be a feature, as the opinion formed upon "consideration of the evidence," is that which is of the most importance in true culture.

Meetings are held on the first and third Mondays of each month, at half-past two.

The work of the year will be directed to a study of the Novel in its origin and development. The first meeting will be occupied by a conversation upon the Romance, and its distinction from the Novel; the proper scope and use of fiction, and the following questions:

- (1) Should the Novel have a "moral purpose" in the conventional sense?
- (2) How does the evolution of the novel conform to the evolution of society, and our sense of obligation toward it?

The second meeting will consider the conditions of the eighteenth century: the decline of the drama and the rise of the essay and novel.

The succeeding meetings will follow the study of the development of fiction, taking up successively the masters of the art from DeFoe to those of the present time.

There will be a short paper presented for discussion once a month, but it is expected that the subject will be developed mainly by conversation and the free interchange of thought.

Conversation and Story-Tellers' Section

Curators:

MRS. ROBERT J. BURDETTE MRS. DONALD A. MACNEIL

Second Saturday, 10:30 A. M.

The purpose of this Section is to assist each member thereof to vivify her interest in the subject presented, to clarify the impression of what she vaguely thinks, and to acquire the graciousness and power of self possession and ready speech. As the earnest speaker of one moment should be the attentive listener of the next, and as the object is to bring the members into a sympathetic and magnanimous relation, it is hoped to cultivate the generosity, mutual courtesy and respectful toleration of those holding views at variance with our own.

Well-timed nonsense is better than ill-timed wisdom ; so a well told story is better than stilted conversation ; many there be who can talk well, few there be who can listen well, and one there may be who can tell a story well. To cultivate this rare gift is one of the hopes of the Conversation Section ; to acquire the art of telling the story which shall illustrate a point better than an hour's monologue ; to brighten the somber expression, to electrify the expressionless ; to leave a smile where lurked a frown.

It is impossible to outline subjects to be considered, else conversation would lose its greatest charm—spontaneity. But such subjects will be chosen as shall fit the needs of the individual members, and no manuscripts or notes will be permitted in the Section.

The hope is that through this Section as well as through all the others, the members of Ebell will become clear thinkers, inspiring listeners, brighter raconteurs, and become, each in her own circle, the ideal hostess who "bears welcome in her eye, her hand, her tongue."

Social Development Section

"The proper task of society is such perfecting of social fellowship that each individual capable of a social service shall contribute that service to social welfare, and in return shall have the amplest assistance from society in the realization of his manhood."

— SPENCER.
