

now as I love them all I would like stops the saw of the letters! by the way you must come in & help me to direct things I think it would be a good plan to enclose a portion of the room with robes of Flora's Bower, & station some one within to sell flowers, I suggested it & the plan was approved if we could only procure the flowers. - Robert says you may come to look if you will stay with us - you must take him at his word & return with John who is obliging enough to take charge of this most slowly servant I cannot write any better for I am help blind with the head ache & chary is impatient for me to go out with her. You will excuse it my dear cousin but do not in pity let any eyes but your own rest upon it Give much love to your mother & father & accept a large portion for yourself from your affectionate
Eliza

I cannot think of the many things I had to tell you but the most important of them is Come home I have been sick ever since you went away & do not believe I will ever be well again I have a notion of visiting to some garden & writing what message shall I send you must write some letters for the fair we will not have enough

I don't know my few lines will do to as other you see but such a one!!
June: As John disappointed me on Saturday. I wrote to commit to your father care this most miserable epistle, which if I had any regard for my own character for mechanics would be thrown aside & another one substituted for it. The fair is to be next Wednesday - they all ~~will~~ hope my having charge of the postoff. & of floral power in connection with you. Laura I believe is to have one of the letters & I believe C. & F. will though. Have I done anything more for the society? you must certainly come in the last of this week. You must write me by the first of Saturday & let me know.
Whether you will join, I do not believe there will be any exceptional character at any of the letters - I wish you would write to Lucy she complains bitterly & might - Chary & I spend all our time at the Capabilities. They are as loony as you please - they have very sweet children
