LORAN

Canadian Pacific Airlines is the latest international airline to order Edo Loran.

The Edo long-range navigation system is being installed in Canadian Pacific's Bristol Britannias—jet-prop airliners used on the line's far-flung "Canadian Empress" routes.

Airline pilots and technicians alike endorse Edo Loran for speed and ease of operation, accuracy and reliability in service. Precise fixes are obtained by the pilot in a matter of seconds from the direct-reading cockpit display. Weight of entire unit is only 29 pounds.

To date, ALL these airlines have selected Edo Loran—Aerolineas Argentinas—Air France—BOAC—Canadian Pacific—Cubana—Eastern Air Lines—Irish Air Lines—Japan Air Lines—KLM—Lufthansa—Northwest—Pan American—Qantas—Sabena—SAS—Swissair—Varig—also in use by the U. S. Military Air Transport Service.
