

FORESEES FLOW OF EXPERTS TO UNITED STATES

Special to The Star

Ottawa, Feb. 20—The decision to drop the Arrow program will deter original development in the Canadian aircraft industry and increase the already high flow of top skilled personnel to the United States, forecast R. N. Redmayne, general manager of the Air Industries and Transport association.

He said: "It's very unfortunate that on the eve of the 50th anniversary of flight in Canada, and our long aviation history, that such a major effort gets torpedoed."

Mr. Redmayne said there is "no doubt this will deter any incentive for any Canadian manufacturer to develop an advanced warplane."

He noted there had already been a lot of skilled aircraft industry workers going to the United States. "I would think after this there will be a lot more," he said.

Mr. Redmayne extended his "deepest sympathy" to the nearly 14,000 persons at Avro and Orenda thrown out of work by the decision.
