CBC MOVIE - The ARROW

in reviewing the material for this file I find it necessary to set the record straight on the reported dismal performance of the remote control flying models.

Although the movie had been in production for some eight months - the models were ordered late with only 90 days to design, build and test.

Despite the negative comment in various articles by authors and film makers - there was tremendous effort by a team of sturdy people to produce aircraft never attempted before.

In the end their effort was recognized with a Canadian Gemini Award for Best Visual Effects and a Manitoba Film Industry BLIZZARD Award.
