ABOUT THE AUTHOR

One of Canada's best-known and most widely respected political commentators, Peter C. Newman spent the Diefenbaker Years as Ottawa Editor of MACLEAN'S. "Backstage at Ottawa," his objective commentary on the national scene became one of Canada's most popular political columns.

Born in Vienna thirty-four years ago and educated at Upper Canada College and the University of Toronto, Newman holds a Master's degree in economics. Before joining MACLEAN'S in 1957, he was for five years assistant editor of THE FINANCIAL POST. He has also worked as a gold miner in northern Quebec and served as a Lieutenant in the Royal Canadian Navy. His previous book FLAME OF POWER was a national best-seller in 1959 and 1960. Married to Christina McCall Newman, who is also a magazine writer, he is continuing his coverage of the nation's business as a member of the Parliamentary Press Gallery. He was recently appointed National Affairs Editor of MACLEAN'S.
