"I have lived a long time and my view has been formed by all I have experienced; but I do believe that from my earliest days I regarded the system of law evolved under the British Crown as the greatest single guarantee of individual liberty for Canadians. I have not changed my mind."

"To those who have labelled me as some kind of maverick, claiming that I have been untrue to the great principles of the Conservative Party, I can only say that they forget the traditions of Disraeli and Shaftesbury. The Conservative Party in Canada had literally to be dragged kicking and screaming into the Twentieth Century."
