SHUTTLE MISSION 51-G

51-G INSIGNIA — The 51-G insignia illustrates the advances in aviation technology in the United States within a relatively short span of the twentieth century. The surnames of the crewmembers for the Discovery's mission appear near the center edge of the circular design. They are Astronauts Daniel C. Brandenstein, mission commander; John O. Creighton, pilot; John M. Fabian, Steven R. Magel and Shannon W. Lucid, mission specialists; and Payload Specialists Sultan Salman Abdelazize Al-Saud and Patrick Baudry. Al-Saud is flying as part of the reimbursable agreement with the Arab Satellite Communications Organization covering the launch of the Arabsat 1B communications satellite and Baudry represents France's Centre National d'Etudes Spatiales.
