

Photograph by Hollynn D'Lil

Above: a member of the Black Panther Party relaxes with occupiers after delivering one of the daily cooked meals that explains the success of San Francisco’s sit-in.

Photograph by Hollynn D'Lil

For twenty-six days occupiers made an office building home, like the woman shown here sleeping on the floor on a mattress donated by the Salvation Army.

Sitting-in for civil rights