

Wildlife on or near Midway Atoll

Courtesy Caren Loebel-Fried

Dolphins

Courtesy Caren Loebel-Fried

Black-footed Albatross and newborn chick

Courtesy Caren Loebel-Fried

Red-footed Boobies

Courtesy Caren Loebel-Fried

Laysan Ducks

By working to reduce your environmental impact, you can help
not only Midway wildlife like Mālie, but creatures everywhere!

HOW CAN I HELP?

You can help protect albatrosses and other wild creatures! Every person can make a difference.

Reuse or recycle plastics to keep them out of the ocean,
and avoid using single-use plastics.

- Instead of accepting plastic bags from stores, bring and use your own bags.
- Use your own refillable water bottle.
- Bring your own “to-go” containers to restaurants and stores.
- Use your own forks, knives, and spoons instead of plastic throw-aways.
- Try not to buy items with excessive or unnecessary plastic packaging.
- Start or join a campaign that asks individual companies to reduce their use of unnecessary plastic packaging.

Save energy and help keep our planet from getting warmer.

- Turn off the lights, TV, and computer when you’re not using them.
- When you can, walk or ride your bike instead of riding in the car.

If you’re shopping at the grocery store, look for safe, healthy seafood.

- Albatrosses, whales, dolphins, and turtles sometimes get caught in fishing nets or lines by mistake. Check the label for fish that have been caught instead with “pole-and-line” or “trolled.”

