

Dear Lady

At Last I send you some your calash. I will acquit you of a belief that I meant to keep quiet possession of it, although I must acknowledge that appearances were very suspicious.
In truth, I know you did not use it at all, & retained it with the less hesitation of course - I wished to make use of it, & it was only yesterday that I obtained the materials for doing so. I hope I shall stand cleared -

What is the meaning of this fearful account I have received that you are not to dine at Dr. Watson's today -

Truly that detestable sick head ache does not continue. I charge your mind, tis an privilege you know -

It is a little age since our chosen spirits met together. Above all things, let me have a particular account of all circumstances concerning you & your movements

I do "exert your energies" - Cannot company still a head aches too. It is to be a delightful day provided you will go - Tell Mr. N. I regretted sincerely that I was obliged to deny myself the pleasure of his visit this morning, but at that moment, or rather that hour, I could not avoid it. ~~They~~ ~~as soon as~~ I am hurried, I will only add that I hope to receive better accounts from yourself than I have from others — A Mr L —

To/ Mrs Nicholas