

La Havre.

Dear Young,

Canton April 30th 1838.

I wrote you a few lines for the Cabot Supplie, but as there was no Circular, I fear the letter did not reach Linton in time for that vessel.
The Havre now offers a fine opportunity, but as usual, I am ready to excuse myself from profiting by it, upon the plea of other engagements.

That is, not so much at length, as I should otherwise wish. The Lagan does not arrive and I have none of your papers to acknowledge.

I send under Charge of Captain Howland, a Box of Cigars et Cetera - I do not recollect hearing Captain Low speak about your Books, but Hunter remembers something of having been said - at any rate I fear that unless they were handed over to Eliacondray - ~~that~~ they have gone back in the Ship.

Mr. Forbes goes over in the Havre, and I refer you to him for all Particulars of our doing, and for information generally.

Should you remain in Canada I will trouble you with longer letters after the middle of the month - I remain, very sincerely
Your friend
A. A. M.

Poor Cabot is dead and buried!
