| Beginning | 8 | 37 | 6 | |
| Middle | 9 | 48 | 36 | |
| End | 11 | 2 | 20 | |
| Duration | 2 | 25 | 14 | |
- Quantity 6 digits on the south side.

The moon's visible latitude at the time of the visible conjunction, is 16 min. 25 sec. and the parallax of latitude at the same time is 53 min. 16 sec. This eclipse will be celebrated in about 20 deg. of the celestial goat. See the type in the title page.

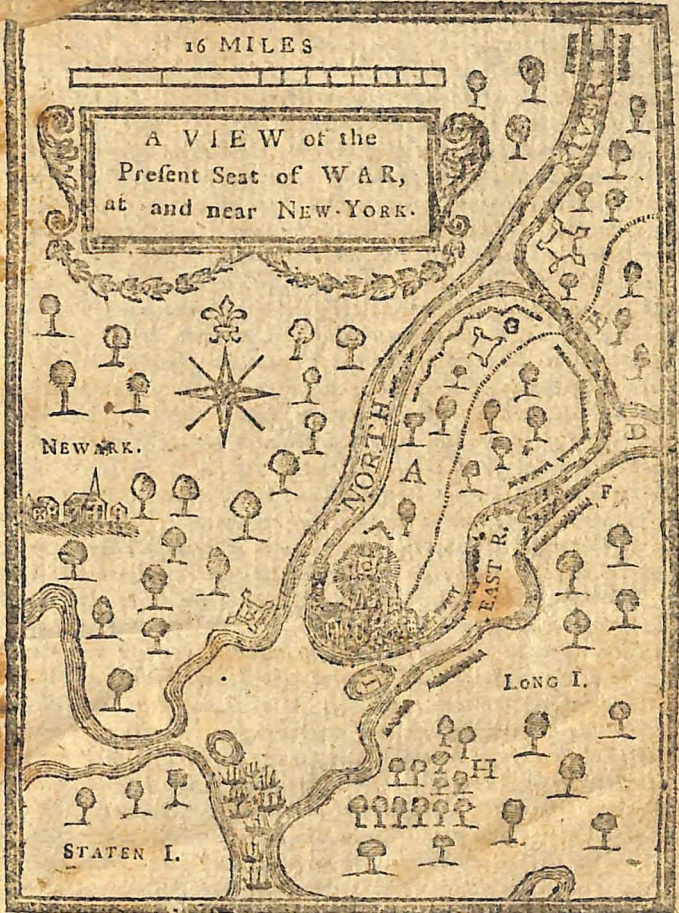

- II. The second will be of the moon on the 23d day of January, about noon, invisible. It will be celebrated in about 4 degrees of the celestial lion.
- III. The third will be of the sun, on the 4th day of July, about 7 afternoon, invisible. This eclipse will be celebrated in about 13 deg. of the celestial crab.
- IV. The fourth will be a very small eclipse of the moon, on the 20th day of July, at 8 o'clock in the morning, invisible. It will be celebrated in about 28 degrees of the celestial goat.
- V. The fifth and last, will be of the sun on the 29th day of December, about 5 afternoon; a very great eclipse in some parts of the world, tho' invisible to us. It will be celebrated in about 9 degrees of the celestial goat.

The planet Venus will be occidental or evening star to the first day of June; thence oriental or morning star to the end of the year.

An Address to the T O R I E S.

GENTLEMEN,

I Cannot call you friends, nor do I consider you in that character, while I thus address you.—Every enemy to his country and its liberties, I esteem an enemy to myself. The liberties of America and the rights of mankind, whatever your professed principles may be, your practices diametrically oppose. You seem to have no just notions of what the wisest men have defined liberty. Whether this results from your having never tasted the bitterness of the opposite extremes; or from self interest, or fear, it matters not, since they all are alike base in themselves, and despised, detested, abhorred by the good man and true patriot, who denies himself when that denial will promote his country's good.—The doctrine of passive obedience and non-resistance, and “the right divine of King's to govern wrong” is your darling tenet.—Revolution principles you have no relish for. You as much detest them in idea, as you practically oppose them: Inso-much that I suppose it would be as easy for the Ethiopian to change his skin, or the Leopard his spot, as for a true Tory should so far prevail, as to induce him to a seeming change, or counterfeit conversion; as it probably will with those who chuse to glide with the current, when the exigency of the times requires it. This being the case, I expect nothing that I can say, will in the least alter the corrupt bias of your minds; you are too far advanced in your wicked apostacy to afford the least ray of hope that you ever will be recovered: This, I think is abundantly evident, as the state of your minds remains unchanged, when you see and hear of the inhuman cruelties, and savage barbarities that have been practised upon those of your unfortunate fellow country-men who have fallen into the hands of our unnatural enemies. Witness also that horrid plot of yours, so providentially discovered, and in which you were detected at New York; and the latent schemes and secret conspiracies which you are daily concerting and endeavouring to execute, though hitherto your most notable attempts have been defeated. Are you not continually endeavouring to interrupt the harmony which so happily subsists in these united states? Do you not endeavour to discourage the hearts and weaken the hands of the people?—By keeping up a treasonable correspondence with, and conveying intelligence secretly to the enemies of the common wealth.—By endeavouring to disconcert the plans, and defeat the measures adopted to save this extensive country from desolation and ruin.—By spreading false reports in the country with a view to prejudice the common cause. By endeavouring to discourage the people from entri-ing as soldiers in defence of their oppressed country.—Does not tormenting envy sit on your brows, and sparking revenge wrangle in your faces, when you hear of the prosperity and success of the American arms, and exult in triumph when you hear the contrary? Have not some of you received, or solicited for bribes to betray your country to its most inveterate enemies?—Say gentlemen, does not your conscience say amen to these things? Suppose you should succeed in your attempts—suppose the enemy should at last obtain the victory, and by your machinations you should be a means of enslaving your native country—your fathers, friends, and brethren, and of entailing misery on your posterity: I beseech you to consider what are the rewards which you expect in competition.—Should you obtain the honours that you hope for, would that be a sufficient recompence? Should you satiate your lust of power, of interest, fame and glory;—would that atone for the wrongs done to your injured country, or quiet the remorse of your own consciences?—Or rather, would not self-condemning reflections still glare you in the face, and like ghostly phantoms incessantly interrupt your repose? How can it be otherwise, when you are become incendiaries, and are bartering away your country and its liberties for a pecuniary reward?—But on the other hand, should America be so successful as by a noble stand to support its independence, and maintain its liberties uncorrupted against the present unjust, ignominious, inglorious attack, which from the present disposition of public affairs there is the greatest reason to hope, you would do well to consider whether you have not by your past and present conduct, justly forfeited the esteem and affection of your fellow-countrymen, which otherwise would have been your due, and made yourselves a nuisance to society by your insidious wiles: But as your number is but small, the mischievous effects of your seditious behaviour will be proportionably the less—I have purposely avoided the appearance of argument in this address; the subject of the present dispute between Great-Britain and the American States, having been already sufficiently discussed by very many far abler hands; and the justice of the cause on the side of America evinced beyond a possibility of doubt; which arguments many of you no doubt have seen, and you have been able never yet to confute them: Constraint and force being the main arguments you inculcate in support of your destructive principles, and more pernicious practices.—Besides, if reasoning with you had it's due effect, there would not now have been a Tory existing either in Great-Britain or America—So that Tories you must remain, except your own feelings when you seriously reflect on the present line of your conduct, and the oppressive nature of your inglorious principles, will bring you to a sense of your duty. But that your future deportment may be such as will merit the approbation of your long abused countrymen, is the sincere wish of the publick's most humble and most obedient servant,

I. JANUARY hath 31 Days. 1777.

Let tyrants rage, and sycophants exclaim,
 Let Tories grumble, parasites defame,
 And all the herd of trembling despots roar
 And plot revenge;—dependence is no more.
 'Tis Independence that we will maintain,
 And Britain's tyrant shall no longer reign.

II. FEBRUARY, hath 28 Days. 1777.

Over this land of freedom with the rod
 Of despotism, his infernal God.
 No more shall he unrighteous powers extend
 Over the sons of freedom in this land.
 Deliver'd from the yoke, no longer he
 Shall us compel his mandates to obey.

IV. APRIL hath 30 Days. 1777.

Your glory's shrouded and your honour's stain'd,
You would not hear when we aloud complain'd.
Complain'd of wrongs.—but you no wrongs redress'd,
Yet knew full well you solely us oppress'd.
We call'd again.—Still you no answer gave,
But fire and sword, to feed the insatiate grave.
Insulted thus, we could not brook the thought,
Of yielding up our liberties for nought.

VIII. AUGUST hath 31 Days. 1777.

O May the happy Day with haste be sped,
 When FREEDOM shall its glorious Plume spread
 O'er this vast Continent; and we no more
 The noise of War and din of Arms deplore.
 But Heav'n ordains--and since it must be so,
 That we must fight with our contending Foe;

IX. SEPTEMBER hath 30 Days. 1777.

Let's arm ourselves with fortitude of Mind,
Nor flee before those Murd'ers of Mankind;
That ministerial Minions may not boast
Of our Subjection by an armed Host.
Bravely contend in Battle for the Prize,
He bleeds with Honor who in Battle dies.
Fearless of Fate and frowning Tyrant's Ned,
Fight on brave Hearts for Liberty and God.

The neglected Maid's Lamentation.

A T A L E.

POOOR Cloe lives pensive, cast down and dejected,
Because she's slighted, and so much neglected,
—“ O tell me the reason! O pray tell me why
My Mates all get sweet-hearts and I am pais'd by!
They leave me at home, and they treat me with scorn;
And I am unpity'd! forsaken, ! forlorn!
My Mates are all welcom'd, respected, carest'd,
They're sweetly saluted—their bosoms are prest'd,
Each heart is transported, with joy how it jumps,
Whilst here I sit moping alone in the dumps
I've made use of all methods, I've try'd ev'ry thing,
On purpose myself into favour to bring;
But all prove abortive, for when I have done,
Of sweet-hearts I never, O never get one:
Myself with fine clothing on Sunday I rig;
And trim up my carcase so neat and so trig:
I put my fine shoes on, and fine yellow gown,
And equally dress from my toe to my crown.
With meal-dust and tallow I trim up my hair,
And spangle with ribbands so neat and so rare;
The green and the yellow, the white and the red,
Are fix'd in due order, and pin'd on my head.
With jewels my ears do I likewise adorn,
The finest and dearest that ever were worn.
I go to my Glass and there fix on my tucker;
And cook up my mouth in its sabbath day's pucker:
And then having fix'd up my person so neat,
I walk as genteely to church through the street.
My mother she always does give me this charge,
To be careful and see that I step not too large;
I keep her directions and constantly mind,
That my heels do not kick up my gown-tail behind.
When at church, my fine rings to advantage to place,
My fingers I hold by the side of my face;
I try to my utmost, I do all I can,
To dazzle the eyes of some silly young man.
I torture my body with whalebone and wood,
To make me look slender, in misery I've rood.

So

So might I go girded, that oft times I swoon,
And always am glad when the parson has done.
And then I trip home as gentle as before,
And am still unsuccessful, and still must deplore!
'Tis the want of a husband that makes me complain:—
Now can you tell Cloe how one she may gain?”

A N S W E R.

POOOR Cloe! you own it has been your whole study,
To dress, to trim up, to embellish your body;
When once you've as richly adorned your mind,
I doubt not but quickly a husband you'll find.

Rules and Reflexions for the CONDUCT of LIFE.

PLATO often inculcates this great Precept, Do thine own Work, and Know thy Self.

Be satisfied with doing well, and leave others to talk of you what they please.

Pitch upon that Course of Life which is the most excellent, and Custom will render it the most delightful.

Rather avoid those Vices you are naturally inclined to, than aim at these Excellencies and Perfections which you were never made for.

Live in Peace with all Men; nevertheless have but one Counsellor of a thousand.

Never defer that till To-morrow, which you can do To-day: Never do that by Proxy which you can do yourself: Deliberate long of what thou canst do but once.

When the Idea of any Pleasure strikes your Imagination make a just Computation between the Duration of the Pleasure and that of the Repentance sure to follow it.

Do good with what thou hast, or it will do thee no Good.

Avoid all Sourness and Austerity of Manners: Virtue is a pleasant and agreeable Quality; and gay and civil Wisdom is always engaging.

Forget others Faults, and remember thine own.

Whatever you dislike in another Person, take Care and correct in yourself.

Imprint this Maxim deeply in your Mind, that there is nothing certain in this Human and Mortal State; by which Means you will avoid being transported with Prosperity, and being dejected in Adversity.

How to get RICHES.

THE Art of getting Riches consists very much in THRIFT. All Men are not equally qualified for getting Money, but it is in the Power of every one alike to practise this Virtue.

He that would be beforehand in the World, must be beforehand with his Business: It is not only ill Management, but discovers a slothful Disposition, to do that in the Afternoon, which should have been done in the Morning.

Useful Attainments in your Minority will procure Riches in Maturity, of which Writing and Accounts are not the meanest.

Learning, whether Speculative or Practical, is, in Popular or mixt Governments, the natural Source of Wealth and Honour.

PRECEPT I.

In Things of Moment, on thyself depend,
Nor trust too far thy Servant or thy Friend:
With private Views, thy Friend may promise fair,
And Servants very seldom prove sincere.

PRECEPT II.

What can be done, with Care perform to Day,
Dangers unthought of will attend Delay;
Your Prospects all precarious are,
And Fortune is as fickle as she's fair.

TRUTH told at last.

SAYS Collin, in Rage, contradicting his Wife,
"You never yet told me one Truth in your Life."
Vex'd Fanny, no way could this Thesis allow,
"You're a Cuckold," says she, "do I tell truth now?"
