

Wednesday evening April 2nd 9th

I have just dictated a letter to Maria & Dear Alex. telling her all about our young & cunning & also that I was going to write to you. which I think I should find more pleasure than all the rest for she is constantly asking us all found it we are not waiting to see how far upon which we all shout at her that we hardly think he comes under that head, as we would any of us be glad to take his place for a short time at least.
But as she writes so seldom herself she is anxious that you should be delighted that would indeed be merit & I am grateful after the proof of disinterested love & generosity that you have shown us for which dear brother receive my warmest thanks, I regret however that you should put yourself to the necessity of restraining any of your wishes while there as your stay will not be long & I fear you will not have so good an opportunity of picking up little things which would be valuable to you all the rest of your life. Above all I am grudge as the common people say that Spanish picture perhaps when you hear of it. Mutual safety & any other needed arrangement that Papa may make, you will think proper to withhold enough for that purpose. Oh that you could have been in Madrid this morning. On the fair Angelica's side all the way from St. Louis to University place. Arriving up stairs & running into stores to see the temperature of the room. Then that evening before at the Gracioso on one of the boards by his side & Mrs. those moments would have been improved that were wasted upon miserable me.
She is looking very sweetly, though to your eye she might appear changed, she is constantly on the go at the theatre if nothing else offers, Mrs. Key sang for us very sweetly last evening. Mr. Harvey had two of his Irish boys quite amusing. Ben mustered out but his poor husband could be induced to go, he is now becoming as fond of his home & his comforts as he was before he was dull of them. It will result of course in her shutting herself up. We are all very anxious that she should accept these Irish invitations as the people are very civil in urging her to come. On Friday we are all invited to Sally's who has made several efforts to have us. But something has always interfered, either on her part or ours, I hope Mr. & Mrs. P. Hamilton still make their appearance there, but I must say I doubt it, as he is beginning already to make wry faces. If you have not already answered his letter I pray you do so by the first opportunity as she has been looking for your reply for some time; she has made a conquest of your friend Quincy Norton, he of this, she is delighted with his warm romantic nature. As she says he has written two pieces under the signature of Isaac T. upon the Boston case. I have not seen them, but your friend the American complimented him upon them. I met Mr. Blair last evening. I Blunt who seems to feel in such a recoil about the unfortunate big cause. That may be however in consequence of his determination to take an active part in the elections, Aunt, Uncle, Polly, & Mr. Garret (the duldest change) have just gone up to Mrs. Ray's who received them yesterday morning & evening. Ma & Pa went up to Grand for good last Saturday week. They drove down to Dedham last Saturday she stayed there & he came in to his dinner he is now well & in excellent spirits, what do you say to our intended visit to Mrs. Miller's, she has been very kind to us ever since her marriage & this winter has made much a point of our visit. What Ma & Pa both think. But it is best for us to go, we think of going the 8th or 10th of April if it were not for Toracious I should look forward to it with pleasure. The season has just arrived - the establishment is perfect, & the situation will be delightful when warm weather comes, today gives us a promise of spring. But until today we had had more winter than in January. You will see the accounts in the paper of the stout winds which have been very uncommon. Together I hope you will see the correspondence between Cass. & Webster. We have only seen the two first letters in which it seems to me Cass is despondent; but they say the second is even more so. We saw Fanny home as she passed through the city on her way home. a day or two since she was most excited & crazy girl with delight. I never saw her so full as you can so well imagine. Baltimore, Wash. & Philadelphia each more delightful than the other as far as in them is the subject of discussion, bouquets, banquets. Attention is abundant. Long Island will present some what of a contrast to all that. Julia Livingston has taken a small two story house in the street leading to University place, & named it "Crisis" in speakable delight. I am pleased, I never saw him appear so animated & pleased. I heard he announced the joyful news to Mary. I cannot tell you how difficult it is for me to realize that she has made up her mind to live for ever with that most stupid of men; & I am sure nothing but the separation from Mrs. Ray would ever have brought that matter to so speedy a conclusion. John S. Stephens' book has made its debut to day, pretty hard times for such expensive works. I fear that his speculations will not be realized & judging from a glance this morning I should think it must be somewhat of a repetition of the first, which according appearance. We all went down & look & look through the glass at the college, which let Bow to reading it is well poor fellow that he takes an interest in the heavenly bodies for certainly he has nothing that he can enjoy much on earth, as he sat singing the other evening at Aunt Schuyler's, we determined he looked as if he had completed his Annuth year. Sad & solemn. he enjoys your letters. & I doubt not repays you in kind.

The City has been a good deal interested of late in the Court which made its appearance about three or four weeks ago. Doubt whether you in that part of the world were permitted to have a look at his Majesty, it was indeed splendid the band say one of the most superb that has ever made its
