

I am extremely sorry my dearest Anne, that you are going to leave the City, without my seeing you, but so it has happened, but I hope we shall meet again, when and how I cannot say.

Will you accept this trifle as a slight token of affection from one who will ever remember the happy times she has spent in your society, and that you may find health and happiness in your new home is the prayer of your attached friend
