

E. Earle sends his compliments to "the beautiful lady", & asks her acceptance of a beautiful Bible.

In asking favours it is not usual to impose conditions; yet E. must hope that Mrs N. will kindly conceal from whom this proof of homage to her Beauty comes, & not expose the gallantry — of which towards her alone he could be guilty. —