My dear Harriet,

I arrived in town early this morning, having posted all night. I come & am rather fatigued. I should like to have a gossip with you, but you will be off & I am so lame & hurried, that I cannot make the exertion ~~at~~ with the uncertainty of finding you at home. Why cannot you call & breakfast with me tomorrow morning. I generally breakfast before nine; but will keep back my breakfast tomorrow morning until ten at a venture - so that you may come either by or before that hour as may best suit your convenience

Yours truly
