Dear Uncle

I enclose you Gerard's letter, the contents I have communicated to D. C. he has concluded to wait a little for good roads thinking the (C's) situation less dangerous than you had made him believe — — It was Featherston & Deniston who wanted so much to see you — on that subject I do not know but conjecture it must be something relating to the N. P. — what confuses me in this is the enclosed from D. C. — left at the Post Office & which I opened without reflection at the time I read Gerard —

— If the letter he therein mentions is a subject of such general notoriety I wonder why D. C. does not himself communicate freely on the subject — or some other good person or other who has the thing as much at heart & tables equally with him the sweets of power.

It is much easier to preach & to dictate
than it is to stand in the breach or try

at the bar —
