

Northampton Sep. 9th 1831

My dear Sir

We have done our best for Alexander I must now trust him to his own resources - should he be in a right humour on Monday, I have not much fear of the result, but if not, he will certainly fail - To give you a single instance of this peculiar trait - Yesterday morning, I examined him in the Greek Grammar near & got very little from him; in the evening I tried him again & he did well. - Mr Stoddard goes with him & will do all he can for him; he will call upon you & I by the name of your acquaintance for him. - I give Alexander the usual certificate of good character & should have written a particular letter to Prof. Knapp, had not Mr Stoddard been there to see him in person. - With renewed assurances of the most grateful feelings, I am very dear Sir

With the highest respect

Your Obedt^l & Affec^d
J. E. Everett

[Faint, mostly illegible handwritten text, likely bleed-through from the reverse side of the page.]

[Vertical handwritten notes in the top left corner of the right page.]

[Vertical handwritten notes along the right edge of the right page.]

