

Saturday morning.

I have so much to tell you my dear Emma that I am at a loss where to begin, and as this note is too small to contain all, and my pen is not as competent as my tongue, I will leave all until I see you, and can you not come down next Monday morning, and remain all night with me. You know we have the little dress to make for Bryan we can do it then if you will come.

Papa is going to Ballston this evening and will not return until next Wednesday, we have room enough for you, and you must not say no to this request.

Your skirt I send with this note. I should have finished it, but don't know how much to turn up at the hem. I wished to send it earlier in the week, but I was prevented from doing.

We have got a house 82 Greenwich St. I wish very much to see you and tell you all about it. I am delighted with it.

Peyton is hurrying me and must close. I have had several letters from W, one from P. Styer. I was quite astonished to receive a letter from her.

Your affectionate
Eliza Storr.

The burning glasses for the Burmans, I have sent to your mother at Mrs Paulding's.

I use my new candle for the first time to seal this note, don't you feel very much honoured.
