

When we parted last night nothing was said about the visits that we, in the morning, talked of paying to day. did you forget them? or had you changed your mind? If you think it will not fatigue you, so much as to interfere with your agreeability this evening, I think you had better make them to day, for it is impossible we could have a more charming day than this is - What say you? & when we meet, we can talk over all our plans for the evening. Have you heard from the G's? Yours most cordially Anne W.
