

These books were given by a dealer in books, to Mrs. George Depont Pratt of Brooklyn (Helen Sherman Depont.), who asked me to make such disposition of them, as I thought advisable. The donor had expressed a wish that they should go to the Schuyler Mansion, at Albany. Two of them, with Elizabeth Hamilton's autograph in them, have been given there; none of them have the autograph of Alexander Hamilton, but nearly all have that of his wife. Several of them have the names of her sons Alexander and Philip. In ^{the copy of will of.} Mrs. Hamilton's ~~will~~ owned by my sister and myself, she says she divides among her sons, their father's "English Library." Undoubtedly these books came from Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton's library at the "Grange", and therefore my sister and I have thought it best to send them there. The enclosed list tells what the books are and gives the autograph signatures in them.

The three volumes ⁽²⁾ of Ferguson's "History of the Roman Republic", were given by James Cochran to Philip Hamilton, who must have been Hamilton's eldest son, a graduate of Columbia University, the old "King's College". Killed in a duel in 1803.

(See portrait in Allan Hamilton's "Intimate Life of Hamilton"). ^{three volumes} These ~~books~~ seem to have on them the stamp of Columbia College,

Presumably as heir, and probably as one of the executors of her husband's estate, Mrs. Hamilton affixed her signature to all these volumes.

The signature of Louis M^cLane Hamilton in the interesting old book "The Antiquities of Rome", London 1699, is that of a gallant officer of the United States Army, who served during the Civil War, remained in the army, and was killed shortly after the peace in the Indian warfare under General Custer. He was a ~~gift~~ man of unusual promise and highly esteemed.

Philip Hamilton 2nd married Rebecca M^cLane, daughter of Hon. Louis M^cLane, U. S. Minister to England. One volume is presented to Mrs. M^cLane in London, by the author.

One volume printed in Philadelphia, 1843, was given to P. Hamilton by A. Livingstone. Probably Angelica Livingstone, who married Hamilton's father's nephew, Alexander Hamilton.

The Schuyler Mansion, has as yet no room or arrangement made, by which visitors can sit and consult books. It is not, therefore, thought advisable, to have any collection of books given it, and there are so essentially Hamilton books, that the "Range" seems the best place for them. The enclosed letter to the present owners of the "Range", now the Rectory of St. Luke's Church, namely the Rector, the Wardens and the Vestry of St. Luke's Church, states the terms of the gift made to these gentlemen by Mrs. George Depont Pratt and Miss Georgina Schuyler.

An inexpensive book stand of some kind, is given with the books, by these ladies.

Mrs. George Depont Pratt is a trustee with Miss Georgina Schuyler of the Board of Trustees of the Schuyler Mansion.
