

Dear Sir

Fishkills the 9th June 1785—

I must take the liberty of referring the inclosed application to you; I do not remember that any Express permission was ever given to Mr. Roney to remove the buildings, tho' I perfectly recollect his mentioning that he had purchased the house and had been at the expense of an addition ~~to it~~ — and I believe intimated that he expected to remove it — Upon the whole from the account I have had of it, I cannot think it of any great disadvantage — As it may eventually prove a means of Mr. Dy Romaine erecting a better building, more to his convenience and to the credit of the State. — Now that Mr.
Roney has taken care of his Own Interest, I hope he will remember that of two years rent, but ten pounds has been paid, and that I have hitherto in vain expected the vouchers for the wood that has been cut and other property taken for publick use —

Whatever Indulgence you may think proper to grant Mr. Dykman in regard to his application will be perfectly agreeable to Dear Sir. Yours Most humble Servt,

P.S. The family join me Samuel Vorplanck in Respectfull Complements to Mr. Lottland Mr. & Mrs. Beckman —
