

You have so centered all my enthusiasm My dear and delightful friend, that I have little left for Mrs Bartley, who however won me in to a good humour, at first I was wofully disappointed, her recitation of the Ode, was perfectly bewitching, and although I still maintain my opinion that thus accompanied by music with any one else to recite but Mrs B: it would be fatal as it was she bewitched my senses, and my reason slumbered, she is preeminently precise. I am panic struck at this moment who but he! Should have had the audacity to repeat it in it after all the broad hints I rejoice that I am able thus to employ myself, in a few seconds I shall exit in a rage.
I go again to the theatre to night with Mrs Cadwalader, I do wish this dark & dingy by night that you would go with us. The house will be thin & scrappy. Do come to hear me talk. I have abundance to say to you.

Yrs with the truest affection

Maria Campbell.
