

My most kindly to the family of
S. J. Linnwood & the
dear Mary Lidyman &
to the Boston
help to & words
as you give Lamory then
a few
and
may find
the

it is very kind of you to have written me such an amiable little letter all about my "Book" - I am very glad that it has pleased & amused you - & thank you for telling me that it has done so - I wish you had given me a few more details about my dear Stockbridge & such of its inhabitants as are dear to me - yourself included

who

ever came to have that child is a profound mystery to me.
She was staying in this hotel on her way to Rome & when she found that my daughter & myself were here came to see us - she is extremely clever & amusing - & that is all I can say about her - I am very glad to get a tolerable account of Mrs Butler's health & to hear of my dear Rosalie's state his - I very often wish for her inestimable compa-
-ship - her wild, turbulent, spirits & innumerable con-versational clatter - dear Rose! how good she was to
& for me! - I hope your sister.

(The I have no right to do to designate you) should I think here - given me that night if I had succeeded in carrying out that pretty small plan of mine - You know if you had told me where you had hidden I could probably have bottomed you on the head of my necessary & un-questionable way. I have been seeing her in Paris lately ~~the only member of the~~ designing family for whom I never had any cordial liking - Mrs Austen - as the child of our parents she appears to me affectionate & perfect regard for them - but how ~~these~~ these parents

will be very happy - I have known nothing of Arthur Sedgwick since he was a child - but always credit those of his name with every good intellectual & moral endowment.
We are in Paris - which I hate - for a month longer - then go to my dirty dark dull native London which I hate only a degree less - I have hopes that Mr Winter & her son will not return to America this winter & even if we are not together we shall not be as far apart as with the Atlantic between us.
Good bye my dear young lady - remember

Etats Unis
