The Flying Squid

The flying squid, a ten-armed marine animal about a foot long and closely related to the octopus and the cuttlefish, is the only known creature whose mode of travel, strictly speaking, is a series of leaps on the surface of the sea. In fact, writes David M. Whipple, Glendale, Calif., in Collier's Weekly, these leaps are so long and high that the animals frequently land on the decks of ships.

San Diego Named 60 Years Late
San Diego was discovered about 1542 by a navigator from Spain and was given its name sixty years later.

Slaves Freed

Public Christian feeling, at a very early date, held that the freeing of one's slaves was a good method of expiating one's sins, and many so distinguished themselves, particularly in the Fourth and Fifth centuries. As late as the Thirteenth century, when slavery in France had practically ceased, on certain festivals a number of pigeons would be solemnly freed from captivity in commemoration of this ancient religious act of enfranchisement.

Damage by Pine Beetle

The pine beetle causes average loss of $1,000,000 a year in southern states.
