Bitter Cold Still On As Second Week Ends

This community is closing its second week of bitter cold weather, and while the thermometer is still at the point that sends chills and shivers, there was some relief yesterday from unusually low sub-zero weather of the first of the week. Thermometer watchers in Harrodsburg reported that the mercury on Monday went from 14 to 18 below zero, while from the more exposed places in the country as low as 24 below zero is reported.

The prolonged cold spell when the weather remained around zero for two weeks is unprecedented in the memory of people here. However, equally cold spells for shorter periods have been known but on rare occasions. T. M. Farnsworth reports that Feb. 13, 1895 was the coldest time within his memory, as the thermometer registered 36 below zero.

Be sure to reduce their roughness from 9 days to the birth, and from the birth to 9 days. Increase it if we always have the mother. And if a cow should bruise her udder after she is fresh, do not fail to use the WARM BATH and never put medicine on water, but dry it off and take one inch of machine oil and two inches of coal oil. Just apply it, but do not RUB it. Apply three times a day until well.

Lone Flying Priest

TORONTO, Can. . . Rev. Father J. M. Coulture (above), Canada's sole "flying priest," came out of the Northland to plan for a larger and a "closed" plane with which to service his 200,000 square mile parish. Injuries to his knees several years ago caused him to give up canoe and dog-team travel.

THINK AGAIN!

Death!

A battered, bleeding wreck of what once had been a human being.

Faces torn beyond recognition, limbs broken and twisted. Grotesque and misshapen.

Unsympathetic hands prying thru bedragged clothing, while the curious look on and murmur, "Who is it?"

The trip to the hospital or the morgue.

And then the last ride. You don't come back.

Thirty-six thousand times in 1935 this scene or a variation of it was enacted. One hundred and one of those times were in Louisville.

Not a pretty sight, nor is it a pleasant thing to read about. But read about it you will in 1936. Every fourth day, at the rate the automobile takes its toll of human lives in Louisville.

Lesser tragedies, but tragedies nevertheless, occur at the rate of 828,000 a year. More than 200 a day. Ten every hour!

But, you think, this can't happen to me.

There were 101 men, women and children who thought it couldn't happen to them in Louisville last year.

Their groans of anguish rang in the ears of those who would help them—as yours may.

Their blood ran into the gutters.

Over their bodies the undertaker labored to restore them to some semblance of their former state so their families could look at them.

Is it worth it?

Do the few minutes you save by treading heavily on your car's throttle repay you for your own life, or for the life of someone else whom you have murdered.

Do they?

Think again.

CIVILIANS START WARS; SOLDIERS STOP THEM

Civilians start wars; soldiers stop them. This in substance is the declaration of Major General W. G. Everson, former chief of the militia bureau. He has served in two wars himself, besides devoting much time to the national guard of his state.

The general's remark was intended to be a refutation of the often repeated charge that military men are the cause of wars. He also said: "No soldier wants war, but it is foolhardy to think of disbanding our forces and giving no heed to preparedness."

It is true, as General Everson says, that decisions for war are made by civilian officers of governments. The armies and navies only come into the picture after war is declared. It is only natural that military men, upon whom the responsibilities for ending war must fall, desire to have adequate personnel and equipment with which to combat the enemy when their civilian masters say the word. They also believe that preparedness is the best means for averting aggressions on the part of other nations.

It may be that military authorities sometimes recommend a greater expenditure for war preparations than is necessary, but they do not advocate war itself.
