GIFT OF RARE VIOLINS

Through the gift of Mrs. Matthew J. Whittall, of Worcester, Mass., the music division of the Library of Congress has come into possession of what is said to be the finest collection of Stradivarius violins owned by any public institution in the world.

The instruments, four in number, include two violins, a viola, and a violoncello, made by Antonius Stradivarius, most famous of all violin makers, at Cremona, Italy, between the years 1697 and 1727. One of the violins was formerly owned by Richard Wagner; the other being from the collection of Arthur Betts, a London dealer, who purchased it in 1820.

The viola is one of only eleven instruments of this type known to have been made by the Cremona master, and was at one time in the Wanamaker collection was once the property of Count Castelbarco of Milan.

Violins by Stradivarius have been sold for $10,000 or more, and those made by him during his best period have never been equalled for tone-producing qualities, elegance of form, or beauty of workmanship.

He was born in 1844 and lived to the age of 93. During his long life he is estimated to have made as many as 2,000 instruments, but comparatively few of the are now in existence. Many imitations of his violins have been made and sold as genuine, but experts have no difficulty in detecting those that are spurious.

Births

Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Royalty welcomed a daughter January 28, 1936, whom they have named Margaret Joyce. Good reports come from mother and baby at the A. D. Price Memorial Hospital.

INTERNAL HEAT OF STARS

Ordinary stars have an interior temperature of about 2,000,000,000 degrees. This is the opinion of Dr. T. E. Sterne, of the Harvard observatory. The estimate was mathematically arrived at and based on the theory that energy for stellar radiation of light and heat comes from the atoms under the surface of the stars. Dr. Sterne says this energy can be released by the transmutation of one element into another and also by the complete annihilation of atoms. Both methods require high temperatures and high pressures.—Pathfinder.

N. AMERICA HAS 54 P. C. OF WORLD'S TELEPHONES

The Commerce Department reported figures of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, which showed that 54 per cent of the world's telephones are in North America.

The world total in 1935 was 34,640,000 instruments of which 18,775,000 were in North America.

The grand total increased by 1,190,000 in 1935. Of these, 495,000 were added in North America.

Sixty countries now may be reached by phone.

MAN HAS LETTER FROM THE LATE KING GEORGE

George Wyatt, of Benton, Ky., is proudly displaying an original letter written by the late King George V of England. Mr. Wyatt received the letter, which bears the arms of Windsor Castle, from a friend who got possession of the message in England in 1918. It is addressed to a group of American soldiers who served overseas during the World War.

FIREPROOF WOOD

Builders, property owners, shipper and insurance men last week added up the nation's fire loss for 1935, found that confagurations had cost $245,000,000 and swallowed up some 10,000 human lives. They could reflect sadly that wood is still the commonest building material. But on the good side of the ledger was a report from the National Board of Fire Underwriters containing well-documented assurance that there is such a thing as fireproof wood.

The wood tested, processed by a New Jersey manufacturer, was red oak and maple impregnated thoroughly and uniformly in pressure tanks with ammonium salts which, when hot, release combustion-smothering gases. The treated wood is almost as easily tooled as ordinary wood, a little heavier because of the salt content, no different in appearance. It takes varnish well. The Board's testers created confagration conditions in large chambers fired by a gas nozzle, watched through windows. Under conditions that sent untreated walls and floors roaring up in flames, the treated wood did not burn at all. When exposed to intense heat for long periods, the processed oak and maple charred deeply, but did not produce appreciable flame or aid the spread of combustion. The Board's final verdict: "Practically noncombustible and nonflammable."

FRENZIED DEER

A terror-stricken deer almost ruined the interior of a bank at West Rutland, Vt., and barely escaped injuring a man in its flight from a dog. The deer crashed through the plate glass window of the West Rutland bank, dashed about the offices, leaped out another window and just missed landing on Sam Grembo, who happened along at the time.

Portable gold mills, capable of being transported by airplane into remote mining areas, are being used in northern Ontario and other sections of Canada.

PIONEER PARK NOTES

(H. C. Wood, Curator)

The weather man has tried his plan. To be a dashing hero— But I don't see how he can be As low-down as that zero.

As long as our new governor was not able to be present at the delightful banquet given last Friday night by the Chamber of Commerce, we hope he will sometime in the near future visit Old Fort Harrod. We cannot promise him the good eats he has thus missed, but there was a time when one might have been given quite a pioneer spread, provided James Harrod had first brought in a fine bunch of venison from the nearby forest, and Daniel Boone had added some fresh bear meat, along with a wild turkey contributed by James Ray, while Ann McGinty baked some of her famous cone ponies from the first corn raised by James Harmon down by the cane break at the foot of Fort Hill, not to mention a gourd of wild honey brought in by William Pogue from an old tree near the creek. Simon Kenton, too, would gladly have retold some of his hair-breadth adventures after the feast was ended, and all had gathered around the blazing log fire within the stockade. Oh! those were stirring days!

A few days ago the curator and his wife received a very beautiful and unique New Year's card from far-off Singapore, sent by Mr. and Mrs. Owens VanArsdale. A part of the card is hand-carved sandalwood, a Chinese temple and pagoda, so minutely and exquisitely executed, that it takes a magnifying glass to bring out the full beauty of the workmanship. A flight of birds in the sky, almost specks against the blue, are minute sandalwood birds. The whole card shows the great patience and artistic delicate touch of the oriental hand.

The squirrel family at the Fort has been provided for during the cold winter weather. Now if some kind-hearted miller would contribute some feed for the birds they would much appreciate it.

CONSTRUCTIVE JOURNALISM

No feature of newspaper work is recognized as more important than the constructive force of journalism in promoting goodwill and co-operation among all classes and all sections of our country. Harmony and prosperity and our financial and industrial welfare depend upon the understanding of one class or section by another.

It is a well established fact of history, that newspapers have enormous latent constructive or destructive powers—they can make a war or spoil a peace.

Their influence in either direction is tremendous—possibly greater than many editors are willing to admit.

Newspapers are an institution of democracy, but their power and influence can be no greater than the thought prompting and supporting their editorial policy.—Lancaster Record.

ARRESTED PULLING WOOL FROM BACK OF LIVE SHEEP

Five youths were arrested Thursday on the farm of John Simpson, near the city limits of Nicholasville, on the Harrodsburg road, charged with cruelty to animals and remanded to jail. The five boys, all of whom are under 18 years of age, were seen in the field of Mr. Simpson pulling the wool off the sheep that were grazing. The arrest was made by John Combs, sheriff and the local policeman.

UNIQUE LONG MEMORIAL PLANNED IN LOUISIANA

A unique memorial is planned over the grave of the late Senator Huey P. Long in front of the thirty-three-story Statehouse Long built. Three sunken lakes will be placed in front of the Capitol, with Long's body on an island in the central lake. Bridges will lead to the island from which will rise a broken cylindrical shaft thirty feet high, symbolizing life broken by death.
