HEROES OF AMERICAN HISTORY

THE MAN WHO CAPTURED LIGHTNING! BENJAMIN FRANKLIN

By flying a kite during a thunderstorm he discovered that electricity and lightning were the same. This led to his invention of the lightning rod, which protects buildings from lightning.

Franklin helped write the Declaration of Independence. He also wrote a book full of wise and witty sayings, the famous "Poor Richard's Almanac." Two hundred years ago he printed a magazine, still being published today—the Saturday Evening Post.

A Statesman, who was also fire-chief, writer, inventor, printer, ambassador, newspaper publisher.

He was the youngest of fifteen children and lived to the ripe old age of eighty-four. Franklin was one of the greatest men of all time, equally loved in Europe and America.
