Writers Advised To Write Of Home

Too Much Crime and Politics in Papers; Writers Told to Sing Lays Of Home and Home Building.

There is too much in the newspapers about crime, politics and everything say home-building, in the opinion of Richard S. Reynolds, president of the Reynolds Corporation, a concern dealing in building materials. Mr. Reynolds holds that newspaper and magazine writers could do much toward restoring prosperity and bringing contentment to the nation if they would turn their talents—if they have any—to glorifying home, and making it all that the word connotes.

"Poets, song writers and dreamers have for the past 10 years given their genius to the automobile, the movie, the radio and the airplane," Mr. Reynolds said. "They have not been singing of the home, and that is one reason why there are still about 12,000,000 unemployed in America."

To correct this condition, Mr. Reynolds called a group of newspaper reporters to his office and read them three verses of a poem he had written in collaboration with Audrey Wurdemann, Pulitzer Prize winner, and her husband, Joseph Auslander, of Columbia University. The first verse was by Mr. Reynolds, he said; the second by Mr. Auslander, and the third by Miss Wurdemann. Here they are:

Build me a home, I am lonely.
Lonely for a chimney and cat.
I've been about and I've found out
Life's too big for a flat.

Build me a home, I am hungry
For the bark of a dog in a lane,
For the sight of a light in a window at night.

And the song of a roof in the rain.

Build me a home in a corner
With my window flush with the lawn;
Where life overflows on the heart of a rose.

Where birds may wake me at dawn.

Having read them to the reporters, Mr. Reynolds challenged them to emulate John Howard Payne, Stephen Foster and other singers of old songs that have to do with home and the soil, and to see if they couldn't do better—or at least as well.

An Old Saying
Those who are fearful of death never fully live.

Marie Dionne had a black eye and it rained, but neither fact spoiled the visit of the Keys to the Dionnes. The black eye was the result of a disagreement the smallest of the quintuplets had with a door a few days ago.

Leota, Mona, Mary and Roberta Keys brought the quintuplets dolls, poke bonnets, dresses or the same shade of blue as the blue bonnet, Texas state flower, sombreros and serapes—Mexican blankets from San Antonio.

SPRINGTIME IN KENTUCKY

De little sparrows' chirpin' an' a scoldin' roun' de doo,
An' de redbird is a singin' in de trees;
De blackbird an' de jaybird, dey's a gittin' might peart,
An' de lilac blooms a openin' in de breeze;
'Cause de sun am shinin' brightly
on my little cabin home, Wid de pickaninies playin' on de floo';
De sky's a turnin' bluer, wid de clouds a sailin' pas';
An' springtime, 'eap', has come ag'in once mo'.

De turkey cock's a struttin' an' de rooster flaps his wings,
While de pigeons' makin' love up on de shed;
De crick has bust its bank o' clay
an's runnin' free an' wide,
An' de buzzard's circlin' high up overhead.
As I set an' watch de wedder, in my ol' Kaintucky home,
I can't he'p feelin' monstrous
light an' gay;
And I'll do no mo' complainin', but I'll try to do my bes',
If spring has only come ag'in to stay.

—Mrs. Harmon Stitt.
