Growing Blooms For Perfume

Flower Beds Planted For Color Harmony More Than For Fragrance, But Try a Perfume Bed.

Many plant flower beds for color and decorative masses, kitchen gardens for utility, herb gardens for savor, but only a few plant for perfume in the garden or in cut flowers.

Women of Martha Washington's time knew how to save the delicate scent of rose petals by putting them in jars with salt, of they made a potpourri of different flowers. They gathered damask, roses and lavender and dried them to make linen drawers sweet, or used violet water. They liked the scent of lilacs-of-the-valley and lilacs.

It is possible to plant shrubs and vines and flowering annuals and perennials to add to the fragrance of the gardens—roses, English violets, carnations, and little clove pinks, and some of the fragrant peonies for in-door vases, say floriculturists in the United States Department of Agriculture. There are so many fragrant annuals and perennials for the home garden that a choice depends on preference and climate.

The perfume garden is so planned that one group of plantings is succeeded by another, each with its own appeal, such as sweet alyssum, mignonette, pinks, perennial phlox, sweet heliotrope, stock and some of the nicotianas. Nasturtiums have a spicy fragrance. The leaves of rose geranium are both fragrant and spicy and may scent a fingerbowl or flavor a mild jelly.

Many shrubs are delightfully fragrant—the reddish velvety "sweet-shrub" or Calycanthus; lemon verbenas; lilac; and mockorange, called Philadelphus or syringa in the North, Carolina cherry in the South; the butterfly bush (erroneously called "summer lilac") from China, whose long drooping rich violet blooms give off deep fragrance all summer. The sweet-scented summer-blooming honey suckle vine of the South is the naturalized Japanese honeysuckle, Lonicera Japonica, ranging from Pennsylvania, Ohio and Missouri south; the beautiful and fragrant Chinese and Japanese wisteria, and various sweet species of clematis.

The United States Department of Agriculture has a number of free bulletins with many references to flowering plants with delightful perfume.

TABLE LINENS

You can make the life of your table linens longer by making them shorter. It is the constant folding in the same creases which breaks the threads and makes them wear along the line of the fold. They will wear longer if you cut an inch off one side and one end and hem them again, making the folds come in new places.

THE STAY-AT-HOME

Others go a-traveling, I must stay at home. They see England, Scotland, They see Rome, They see Egypt's skyline, They see the Nile, Perhaps I shall see them After a while.

Now I tend the fire, Now I mind the door, Now I sew a button on Where it was before. I can watch the postman Coming down the street, And a neighbor brings me A honey cake to eat.

I must tend the roses On my little lawn, Everything would die, I think, If I should be gone. I hear all the town's news; Births and deaths and such— If I should go traveling I would miss so much. —Grace Noll Crowell.

NEW STYLE CALLING CARDS

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Hart and Mr. and Mrs. Will Hart, of Lexington, called Sunday afternoon to see the Messrs. Harts' sister, Mrs. Will Leek, on North Main street in Cynthiana. Not finding her at home the party left calling cards.

The "cards" were four fresh eggs which had been gathered at Howard Hart's newly acquired farm near Lexington. On each egg was written the name of a member of the party. The "cards" were left in the mail box. It is a quaint custom but one that will not have a widespread following. —Cynthiana Democrat.
