COLEMAN

At his home on Beaumont avenue, on Friday evening, October 9, 1936, Thomas H. Coleman peacefully passed to rest in a bright Christian faith after laying down a body distressed with pain. Beautiful funeral services were conducted Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the Baptist church of which he was a member, by his pastor, Rev. G. Whitcomb Ellers, assisted by Rev. T. Hassell Bowen of the Christian church. Interment took place at the family lot in Spring Hill cemetery.

Early in life he was united in marriage to Miss Dixie Cohen, of Boyle county, and to this happy union was born two sons, Rosser, who died at the age of four years, and Henry, who survives. In his immediate family to mourn their loss of a kind loving husband and father and grandfather are the wife, son Henry and granddaughter, Joanna Ball Coleman.

Mr. Coleman was descended from pioneer ancestry in Kentucky. His father was Robert S. Coleman, son of James H. Coleman who was brought to Kentucky at the age of twelve years. The family is of English-Irish origin. His mother was Margaret Alexander, daughter of Stephen and Mary C. (Alexander) Hughes, both of English-Scotch origin.

Four sisters survive him, Mrs. L. D. Cardwell, Mrs. W. F. Dennis, Mrs. W. J. Poteet, of Washington and Mrs. Roberta Browning Moore, of Chicago.

As a young man he was engaged in the livery business with his father. Later he was invited into the railroad contracting business by his brother-in-law, Major Ed Rosser, who had noted his ability for observing details in business. In this line he was a member of different contracting firms. His first undertaking was in Eastern Kentucky with the construction for the Kentucky Union Railroad. From this his ability became better known and from that time on he was either engaged in large construction work, independently or in company with others.

Among some of the construction works with which he was associated were tunnels for the Norfolk & Western Railroad; the Ohio River Railway, Dubois & Sikesville-Clearfield-Henry Davis Road in West Virginia. His most important work was on two sections of the Chicago Drainage Canal. After this he returned home and bought the family ancestral estate on the Lexington road, known as Woodland Manor, on which he erected an elegant home. This home he sold about a year ago when enfeebled health demanded he quit farming. After purchasing this place and before the completion of the mansion he associated with others in the construction of the great Catskill Aqueduct in New York which supplies water for New York City. This project cost over a million dollars a mile. At the beginning of the World War he was a partner with Mason Hanger Company; he was general manager of the construction of Camp Taylor at Louisville; the Aviation Camp at Lake Charles, La.; at Nashville, Tenn., he built DuPont Powder Co., an up-to-date industrial city for ten thousand inhabitants, with school buildings and Y.M.C.A. This was a model city.

Returning home from this work he returned again to the activities of his estate and that of the Mercer National Bank of which he was a director.

Mr. Coleman was responsive to every good cause. His kind, modest life won for him a host of friends and his passing is much lamented.
