LIBRARY NOTES

"You seem to be well informed on all subjects," said one friend in conversation with another. The reply was "I go to the Public Library here for information. In fact, books are tools which shape for me confused mental ideas."

It means much to be fortified with the proper background of reading. It means stimulation to the mind, and broadening of culture to examine the thoughts of others and compare them with our own. Research books are, however, not the only available literature in the Harrodsburg Public Library. The latest fiction is beguiling, also books of adventure and travel.

The most widely read book of 1935 was "North to the Orient" by Anne Morrow Lindbergh. She writes graphically and entertainingly of the hazardous voyages in the air across the white wastes of the Arctic Circle and along the dangerous reefs of oriental seas. Who but this gifted writer of travel and scenery so well describes such a journey, making the reader see and feel the danger and the sensations she endured. Her book is in the Harrodsburg library.

November the 25th was outstanding as the 100th anniversary of the birth of Andrew Carnegie—that wonderful benefactor of mankind who established nearly 3000 libraries in the world at an approximate cost of $65,000,000. The day was celebrated throughout the U. S. Canada, and the British Dominions.

FRENCH TOAST SANDWICHES

French Toast has been no foreigner in American homes for the last half century. Every mother knows it as a blessing for those school day lunches when the children come trooping home, cold and hungry in need of nourishing and appetizing food.

The "makings" of French Toast are practically always on hand to fall back upon.

And now there are the new French Toast sandwiches that put a new complexion on this old standby. The wonder is that it took so long for the country's cooks to think up such an obviously good idea. They seem to click immediately.

Just make sandwiches in the usual manner, using any favorite filling between the slices of wholesome white bread. Fillings that hold the slices together are preferable. Press firmly, dip the sandwich into egg and milk (one cup of milk added to two beaten eggs and one fourth teaspoon of salt) and fry gently in butter until bread is golden brown. Serve hot.

This amount of egg and milk makes six sandwiches. A cheese filling is excellent since the cheese melts during the frying and becomes creamy. Peanut butter is also delicious, especially when the hot fried sandwich is accompanied by jelly or jam. Finely ground meats, hard cooked eggs or shredded fish may be used with excellent results.

As a snack for Sunday night tea, the French Toast sandwich can look forward to a brilliant future as a social favorite.

WOMAN DISPOSES OF $100,000 IN A WILL OF 95,000 WORDS

Though it has been stated in court that the late Sir Thomas Lipton had such a fancy for making wills that he once made two in a single day, he does not seem to have devoted so much time and care to his last testament as did Mrs. Fredrica Cook, of London, who died ten years ago leaving a will containing over 95,000 words, all in her own handwriting.

This remarkable document covered over 2,000 sheets of paper, elaborately bound in four volumes, and contained what was virtually a priced inventory of almost everything she possessed, including jewelry, furs, lace, pictures, works of art, and clothes, the total value of the estate being $100,000.

WHERE ANY DAME IS NOT A "DAME"

Boys who refer to their girl friends as "dames" do not realize the honor they might be conferring. Christabel Pankhurst was made a "dame" by the King of England. "Dames" rank with knights in Britain. Miss Pankhurst was an indefatigable worker for suffrage and women's rights in general. She was honored for "public and social services."

Some of the boys now call the girl friend "babe"—and do girls hate it! Once they addressed her as kid. Perhaps "dame" will again be in vogue. If the boys use the term they won't be kidding the modern girls who are matches enough for them in most anything.—Exchange.

VELVET SCARFS PARIS RAGE

Colored velvet scarfs are enjoying an immense success in Paris. Worn with fur coats, with tailcoats and with cloth coats, they are usually in rich shades and perhaps the prettiest use two contrasting tones together.

Meg Lemonnier, one of the best dressed of the young French actresses, wears with her dead black street costume a velvet scarf in bright emerald and a deep reddish purple. So many of the fur coats remain collarless that these velvet scarfs are not only attractive, but practical as well. They are even worn with sports clothes at golf clubs.

It is now disclosed by a safety survey of a Western state that there are few accidents on soft back-country roads. Since there is also little traffic on these roads, the solution of the accident problem is obvious.

6,000 QTS. WILD FRUIT CANNED BY RESETTLERS

When the offices of the Texas-Oklahoma Resettlement Administration transferred recently from Stillwater to Dallas, Texas, the files freighted to the new headquarters carried chronicles of courage and far-sightedness.

These resettlement families, backed by the Government in their efforts to make farming pay, have canned literally thousands upon thousands of jars of vegetables, fruits and meats. But in Grimes county, Texas, there simply was not enough fruit in any of the 70 rehabilitation families' crops to complete the canning budgets. But this did not daunt these women. They went into the woods and gathered the wild fruits. Of course there were those who said no county in Texas ever produced enough wild fruit for 70 families' winter pantry, but the women now have on their shelves 6,000 quarts of their county's wild fruits.

They made a festival at the gathering and the canning, and one woman, Mrs. J. B. Shires, because she did better than any of the others, was awarded a cold pack canner. So much fun was had during the pilgrimages into the woods, and the neighborhood canning bees that men, women and children who had never before found sustenance in the wild growth of their county are looking forward to next season and the second community wild fruit festival.

"5 AND 10" GIRL NAMED "MISS MODEL AMERICA"

A 19-year-old beauty from Pittsburgh, Penn., wore a bathing suit to win the title of "Miss America of 1935," at Los Angeles, California, Thursday.

That night she dressed up in evening gowns and was acclaimed "Miss Model America of 1935."

Next day she eyed a movie contract, but declared she wouldn't start her film career by being undressed.

She is Henrietta Leaver, slender, dark-haired former clerk in a "five and ten" store.

Two thousand buyers from the Nation's department stores voted her the most talented of six mannequins.

GARRARD HOMEMAKER WINS IN CONTEST

A Garrard County Homemaker, Mrs. J. W. Gulley, was awarded second place in the state homemakers canning contest. Her entry was the result of a preliminary county contest in which forty-eight homemakers each entered a jar of fruit and a jar of vegetables. This contest was judged by Miss Doris VanWinkle, a Paint Lick leader, who is now Home Demonstration Agent in Leslie county. Mrs. Gulley's entry consisted of a jar of peaches and a jar of baby beets. The award for this placing is a scholarship to Fern and Home Convention.

GARDEN ASLEEP

My garden wears an air of deep content,
Like one who labored long and patiently
At tapestries, then generously lent
Her handiwork for some festivity.
Gone are the vivid weavings. Now
The loom
Is idle, waiting for the shining
Thread;
On long departed winds the rich perfume
Of myriads of blossoms rose and fled.
And now my garden waits, with half-closed eyes,
In attitude of rest, but listening;
It will rise slowly, calm, without surprise,
When rebudbs sound the clarion of Spring.

—Nancy Richey Ranson.
